Ripcords Aided Fast Strip By Women Douks

NELSON (BUP)—Police had the answer today to why radical Doukhobors managed to shed their clothes so fast officers couldn't stop them.

They used ripcords.

Hidden string ripcords came to light when 31 male and female "Sons of Freedom" doffed their clothes Friday in defiance of Canadian law which had just seen them sentenced to three years in jail for nudism. (Eighteen of the jailed women will go to the Kingston Penitentiary.

The nudist demonstration took less than five seconds to accomplish where the women were concerned and a little longer for the men, who were collared by alert officers when they got down to their underwear.

Death For Reds In Malaya

SINGAPORE (CP) — The Malayan government today put still more teeth in its anti-Communist campaign by providing the death penalty for Communist agents. Until now only armed terrorists have been liable to the extreme penalty.

The latest government move came on the heels of an attempt on the life of Singapore's governor, Sir Franklin Gimson.

The governor was hit on the leg early today by a piece of unexploded hand grenade which police said unquestionably was thrown by a Communist. Sir Franklin was not hurt.

More Arms For Italy

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — The freighter Hellas, bringing the second shipment of U.S. arms aid to Italy, docked today in the heavily-guarded Naples port area. The port area remained quiet and there were no immediate indications of any demonstrations by Communists seeking to hamper unloading.

M.P. To Investigate Floods In Manitoba

OTTAWA (CP)—Leslie Mutch, Liberal member of Parliament for Winnipeg South and parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Veterans' Affairs, left Ottawa by plane early today for Winnipeg to investigate the flood situation.

It was understood he will confer with provincial and local authorities.

Arsenal Takes Soccer Cup By Score Of 2-0

LONDON (Reuter) — London's mighty Arsenal Gunners today overcame a stubborn Liverpool squad 2 to 0 before 100,000 rain-soaked fans in Wembley Stadium to capture the Football Association Cup, premier prize of British soccer.

Arsenal opportunism, plus the stoutest of defences which refused to crack before a sustained second-half drive by the Merseysiders, won the day for the local club.

It was Arsenal's third cup triumph and, as in 1930 and 1936, the King presented the famed trophy to the London eleven. Liverpool has yet to win the honor.

The Gunners and the squad from Britain's big Lancashire port city were the lone survivors in the cup competition after a series of elimination contests involving more than 200 soccer teams.

High School Senior's Belief May Bar Him

TOLEDO, O. (AP)—A religious belief may cost an 18-year-old Ohio high school senior his diploma.

Ronald Terry says he wants to live up to the biblical requirement that Christians shall "adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety."

That's why he refuses to attend physical education classes at Macomber Vocational High School.

"It's not only the nakedness of myself," he explains, "but also being present in that environment. I just don't feel right about it."

School officials have offered to let him dress and undress in private, or even wear street clothes to gymnasium classes.

Ronald won't do either.

Principal F. A. Dannenfelser told him in January he could not graduate if he did not attend the physical education sessions.

"I'll go to my other classes," Ronald said. He has not been in the gymnasium since.

Dannenfelser and acting school superintendent Philo Dunsmore today said their offer will expire Monday. He must attend from then on or not graduate.

McGillycuddy Dies

KILLARNEY, Ireland (CP)—Lt.-Col. Ross Kinloch McGillycuddy, 67, holder of one of the oldest Irish titles and a member of the Eire Senate from 1929 to 1943, died Friday.

General Election Called Over Belgium's Monarch

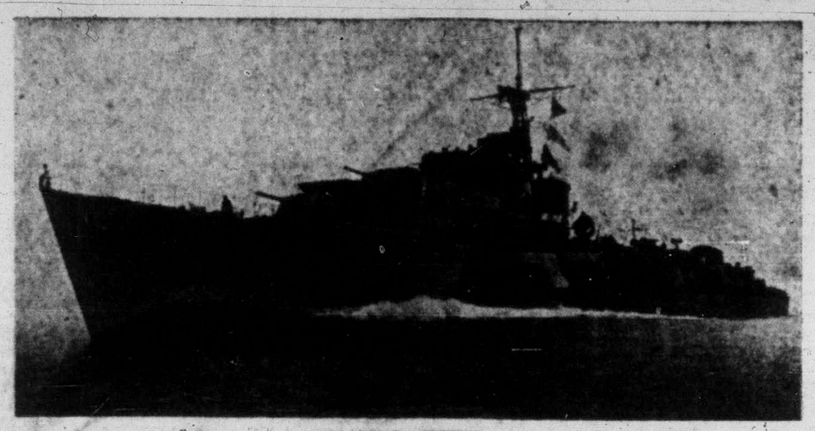
BRUSSELS (UP)—Prince Regent Charles today dissolved the Belgian parliament, making a general election necessary in the dispute over the return of King Leopold to the Belgian Throne.

The crisis over the King's return headed toward a climax early today when Paul van Zeeland, a pro-Leopold Social Christian (Catholic) Party leader, announced his resignation.

Van Zeeland tried fruitlessly for 25 days to form a government and evolve a compromise on Leopold's return. His failure was based on two main factors:

1. Objection by the Socialist Party to Leopold remaining in Belgium after delegating his powers to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin. Leopold had agreed to surrender his powers after 18 days, but refused to make any specific agreement to go abroad again.

2. The Liberal Party was willing to let Leopold remain in Belgium after delegating his powers to his son, but Liberal leaders refused to accept Van Zeeland as Premier.



H.M.C.S. SIOUX

Destroyer Sioux Racing To Aid Of Sick Mariner

The Canadian destroyer Sioux is racing westward across the Pacific at top speed today taking medical aid to a seaman aboard the Greek freighter Maria Kulupumdis, 600 miles off Vancouver Island.

It is believed the seaman has a ruptured appendix.

Aboard the destroyer are two doctors, medical assistants and medical equipment.

The call for assistance came at 4 this morning. Sioux, commanded by Cmdr. David W. Groos, left her Esquimalt base at 8.20.

WEATHER BAD

Weather in the area where the Maria Kulupumdis is awaiting aid is reported to be too bad for doctor to be taken by aircraft.

Steaming under forced draught, Sioux should reach the freighter sometime Sunday afternoon, a naval spokesman said.

So hurried was her departure from H.M.C. Dockyard today that a few of her crew members were left on the jetty.

The destroyer is the most modern in the Canadian navy. She underwent an extensive modernization refit last winter which included substituting the traditional hammocks for bunks and other features designed to increase comfort for men.

CBC Board To Meet

OTTAWA (CP)—Next meeting of the CBC board of governors will be held in Ottawa May 22 and 23, it was announced. The last meeting of the board was held here in March.

Hirohito Has Birthday, Gets Many Visitors

TOKYO (UP)—More than 100,000 visitors from all corners of Japan paid tribute to Emperor Hirohito today on his 49th birthday.

They swarmed through the grounds of Tokyo's Imperial Palace and signed their names in a guest book while Hirohito held a private anniversary celebration with members of his immediate family.

Once during the day the Emperor appeared on the balcony of a palace building and waved his hat to the holiday throng. The crowd went wild with shouts of "Banzai" and sang the national anthem "Kimigayo"—"The Emperor Reigns."

Actually, however, the real ruler of Japan—Gen. Douglas MacArthur—sat a few hundred yards away across a moat in a sixth floor office of a modern business building.

The Emperor's birthday celebration today was simple and without pomp compared with the days when he was a god to his subjects and Japan held sway over half of Asia.

WEEK-END TO BE SUNNY ONE

After short-changing Victorians this spring, the sun now is trying to make amends and has indicated its intention of providing another sunny week-end to match the bright one of last week.

The weatherman reports the sun will shine at its best both today and Sunday with only light winds disturbing the warm rays.

A high of 60 degrees is predicted for tomorrow, following a low of 42 tonight.

London's Dock Strikers End Layoff Monday

LONDON (Reuter)—London's 11-day dock strike virtually ended today when 2,000 key representatives of the 14,500 strikers decided to resume work Monday on 205 ships now idle.

The men warned, however, that there would be an "immediate and extended" resumption of the stoppage should three of their leaders be refused work.

Expulsion of the three from the Transport and General Workers' Union for their part in the British dock strike last summer in support of striking Canadian seamen fired off the present strike of April 19.

Under union rule British dockers may not work alongside non-ticket holders, and today's result anticipated any attempt to lay off the three expelled men.

INVESTIGATION

After the back-to-work decision, the unofficial port workers' committee leading the strike called on the government to investigate the administration of the National Dock Labor Board (representing employers and unions) when it conducts its promised inquiry into the docks situation.

Java Slayings Stir Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UP) — Premier Mohammed Hatta ordered Indonesian police and armed forces today to leave no stone unturned in a search for the killers of two U.S. citizens in an ambush on a lonely road.

Hatta announced an all-out drive to capture the assassins in a nation-wide radio speech. He directed it to the relatives of the slain Americans, Robert Doyle, Life magazine correspondent, and Prof. Raymond Kennedy of Yale.

They were slain Thursday by a band of about five men while driving in Kennedy's red jeep on the Bandoeng-Cheribon highway.

Red Cross Declares One District Disaster Area

HOLDENVILLE, Okla. (UP)—At least 12 persons were dead today from a series of tornadoes which slashed across central Oklahoma and West Texas Friday night.

Five of the known dead were here in central Oklahoma where a tornado let down at the southwest edge of Hodenville, skipping and twisting over an area 18 blocks long and a half-block to three blocks wide.

Five persons were killed in Callahan County, Texas—three from one family in the little town of Clyde and two others nears the town of Baird.

A Sentinel, Okla., banker collapsed apparently of a heart attack shortly after telephoning a frantic warning to his wife that a tornado was approaching the town, in southwestern Oklahoma. At Hobart, a 65-year-old man was killed when the same twister destroyed his home.

18 IN HOSPITAL

Holdenville was the heaviest hit. The Red Cross declared the city of 7,000 a disaster area.

Eighteen persons were hospitalized here with stor minjuries. At least three were in critical condition.

Oklahoma highway patrolman O. L. Nickerson reported the number of injured may be more than 40 when all reports are in.

Sixty homes in one 10-block area were destroyed. But by dawn all persons had been accounted for. In the first hours of confusion Friday night, four were listed as missing.

In west Texas, a 100-mile strip ranging from Haskell southward to the Clyde-Baird area not far from the plains city of Abilene, was buffeted by winds and beaten by hail.

At several points, hailstones were said to have been "big as baseballs."

338 Foreigners Leave Red China

HONGKONG (AP) — The steamship Heinrich Jessen arrived today with 338 foreigners from Communist China. Thirty-three are Americans, mostly members of missionary families.

The Jebsen Line vessel, originally built to accommodate 36 passengers, brought the foreigners from Tientsin.

Among the passengers were Dienus Hendrick Visscher, chancellor of the Netherlands Consulate at Shanghai.

Greeks In Peace Move

ATHENS (AP)—Greece Friday night joined Yugoslavia in seeking better relations between the two Balkan neighbors. Following closely Yugoslav Premier Tito's announcement that his government would soon name a new minister to Greece, Premier Gen. Nicholas Plastiras said Friday his new government would send a diplomatic representative to Yugoslavia.

Korean Flier Chased By Russian Planes

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—A pilot who fled from Communist North Korea in a Russian-made fighter plane said today he was pursued by two other planes and shot at by the Reds' anti-aircraft guns.

Lieut. Lee Kun Soon, 24, landed at Pusan on the South Korean coast Friday after a 340-mile flight from Yonpori.

N.S. Coal Mine Sealed Off To Check Flames

STELLARTON, N.S. (CP)—The Allan shaft coal mine here was sealed off with sand and timber today in an effort to check a raging fire which Friday threatened the lives of seven trapped miners.

Hospital authorities at nearby New Glasgow today reported all seven men were on the danger list. They were seriously burned in the blast that set off the fire.

Most seriously injured were James Johnston, Stellarton town councillor, and Brenton Yuill. The others are George Porter, Bert Vacheresse, Eugene Davidson, William Petelka and N. B. Dorrington. Suffering from shock are Petelka and Dorrington, the last two to be brought out after rescue crews went into the depths.

Officials of the Nova Scotia Mines Department, who arrived at the scene late Friday night, today began preliminary investigation into the cause of the explosion.

As anxious relatives swarmed around the pithead the survivors came up — their clothes ripped and burned and their flesh seared by the terrific blast of unknown origin at the 1,200-foot level.

Personal stories of their escape remained untold. Hospital authorities said their condition was too critical to permit them to be interviewed.

This appeared to be the story: The seven were part of a 20-man crew. After the blast, four managed to get to the surface by themselves; another tried to make it alone and collapsed and had to be assisted by rescuers; the other two lay for almost two hours before being helped out by the masked draegermen.

Manitoba Gets Ready To Face Flood Crisis

WINNIPEG (CP) — Waterlogged southern Manitoba today braced itself for what may be the highest flood level in 124 years.

Already at Emerson, where the Red River enters Canada on its downstream course towards Lake Winnipeg, the reading has topped that recorded in the 1897 disaster. Not since the legendary flood of 1826 has there been so much water in the valley.

Fed by the melting of an unseasonable spring snowstorm, the Red rose to 46 feet above datum. The figure is an inch above the 1897 high and nearly two feet above the 1948 peak.

The rise was general as far north as Winnipeg, 60 miles away. The all-out blow was expected Sunday.

As damage mounted in the valley's week-long battle with the relentless Red, the federal government promised to investigate the possibility of federal aid.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons the inquiry will decide what action, if any, will be taken.

His statement followed a telegram from Mayor Harry Shewman of Morris, Man., halfway along the river's path from the border to Winnipeg.

The telegram said damage in that area was about $1,000,000 and termed the situation a "national emergency."

Weather Forecast

Sunny today and tomorrow, light winds. Little change in temperature. Low tonight, 42; high tomorrow, 60.

MOST OF WORLD FROWNS ON HOOVER

Proposal To Reorganize U.N. Without Reds Widely Condemned

By CANADIAN PRESS

Former President Herbert Hoover's proposal that the United Nations be revamped without Russia gained little approval throughout the world, a survey showed today.

Most responsible government officials refrained from comment.

Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo said the U.N., with Russia in it, is the "only workable bridge that we have today between the two hostile camps on either side of the chasm."

Vladimir Houdek, permanent delegate from Communist Czechoslovakia, said the Russian-bloc countries, who have been boycotting the U.N. over the question of Chinese Nationalist representation, are not going to "quit the U.N."

Houdek's statement at a press conference was the first reaction from one of the countries which Hoover's proposal would exclude.

British diplomatic sources said the idea "would not be looked on favorably" in that country. They said the U.N. still serves a useful purpose as a point of contact among all countries.

The French Foreign Office, after studying Hoover's suggestion for six hours, decided not to comment.

T. F. Hsiang, chief delegate of Nationalist China, said the world "is not quite ready for such a drastic proposal, but the pressure of world events will eventually drive us to accept Mr. Hoover's proposal."

From Cairo came one of the strongest expressions of disapproval:

"Ousting the Communist nations from the United Nations would be the surest way to transform the cold war into a shooting war," said an unofficial but representative source.

Australian newspapers scarcely mentioned the plan.

Early Start Promised On Mass Douk Arrests

SHARP-SHOOTING CORONER KILLS ESCAPED LEOPARD

LEBANON, Ohio (BUP)—A leopard escaped from a wrecked circus truck near Lebanon, Ohio, today but was shot to death 20 minutes later by a sharp-shooting coroner.

The big cat was set free when a King Bros. Circus truck and an empty car carrier truck collided at an intersection six miles north of Lebanon. Edward C. Godon, a circus performer, was killed in the collision.

Two tigers and a baboon in the circus truck made no attempt to escape.

Dr. H. M. Williams, Waren County coroner, one of a group of four that rushed to the scene, felled the leopard with one shot as the animal came out of the darkness and stepped into the beam of headlights playing on the wreckage.

The bullet struck the animal between the eyes.

Old Vernon Army Camp To Be Jail, Says Wismer

Mass arrests of law-breaking Doukhobors in the Kootenays and their detention in the former army camp at Vernon is expected shortly.

Attorney-General Gordon Wismer said today on his return from Ottawa lack of jail accommodation has hampered B.C. Police in quelling the fire-rioting of the fanatical Sons of Freedom in the Krestova area but "we'll be able to deal with them adequately soon."

The attorney-general promised arrest of every Doukhobor who breaks the law.

No special sittings of the assizes will be called to deal with the offenders because of the pressure on the courts now. The regular assizes in June will hear the cases.

Mr. Wismer went to Ottawa two weeks ago to take up the question of the R.C.M.P. policing the province in place of the provincial force, and other matters of importance.

The Krestova Doukhobors started their rampaging after his departure but he kept in touch with the situation.

TO USE VERNON CAMP

He indicated decision to use the Vernon army camp as a jail for the Doukhobors had been reached after considerable study, and pointed out temporary quarters had to be found because no province could be expected to have available detention quarters capable of handling the large number of Doukhobors to be arrested.

"To my way of thinking," he said, "the Doukhobor problem has reached the state of civil insurrection.

"As such, it should be dealt with by the national government.

"But the B.C. police has done a splendid job in controling the trouble-makers and have arrested as many as they could in keeping with the jail accommodation we have."

The provincial officers had sealed in Krestova, the main trouble centre, and patrols were being made continually in the district.

The attorney-general reminded that there were many law-abiding Doukhobors in the Kootenays and he said the lawless activities of a smaller group would not deter the government in its efforts to find a long-range solution to the problem affecting all of them.

To Tighten Up Drunk Driving Laws In Canada

The drunken driving laws of Canada are to be tightened up to eliminate loopholes which have come to light recently in court actions.

Attorney-General Gordon S. Wismer said today amendments are being drafted to Criminal Code to stop the many acquittals the courts have been forced to render.

He said the question was discussed with F. P. Varcoe, deputy minister of justice.

"And I expect a letter any day now asking my opinions on contemplated code changes," Mr. Wismar said.

Blood tests, balloon tests and other examinations for drunkenness were being investigated.

Also being considered was placing the onus on the person suspected of drunken driving.

"I'm not saying I approve of this idea, but it does give food for thought," said Mr. Wismar.

"This would mean," he added, "if you want to drink and drive you do it at your own peril."

Action Of Workers Monday Decides Building Activity

Company Plans To Reopen Work If 75 Building Tradesmen Back

By DAVE STOCK

Action by 75 building tradesmen employed by the contracting firm of Dawson and Hall Ltd., will decide Monday whether or not building activity in the city is to resume next week.

The company plans to reopen work on the $1,500,000 provincial government office building on Government Street, between Elliot and Superior.

Reopening of this project has been sanctioned by the Victoria Building Industries Exchange. Exchange officials say they regard it as a test.

If Dawson and Hall employees report for work Monday morning and are willing to use materials provided them, then all work stopped by the 18 exchange members April 6 will be reopened.

Attention Monday will be focused on laborers and carpenters. These men so far have stood behind a recommendation handed down by the Victoria Building Trades Council (A.F.L.-T.L.C.) to respect picket lines set up by strikers from the building supply firm of Evans, Coleman and Johnson Bros. Ltd., and to refuse to handle material on any project normally supplied by the struck firm.

The union men will not have to concern themselves with the first phase of this recommendation. There will be no picket lines on the job. Mr. Justice A. D. Macfarlane Friday issued an injunction prohibiting picketing of the project.

The second phase, that of refusing to handle material normally supplied by Evans, Coleman and Johnson Bros Ltd., will be of primary concern. This is the point upon which the whole test centres.

Normally Evans, Coleman and Johnson would supply sand, gravel and cement for this job.

The company now proposes to get its sand and gravel from the Albert Head pits of Producers Sand and Gravel Co. Ltd., and its cement direct from the Bamberton plant of B.C. Cement Company.

It is certain there will be some objection to this from union sources in view of the fact Producers Sand and Gravel Co. Ltd. is recognized as a subsidiary of Evans, Coleman and Johnson Bros.

FISHING FINE AT COWICHAN

"Drop everything and come on up, the fishing is really wonderful," was the flash today to local sportsmen from boathouse men in the upper reaches of the Cowichan River. The fishing has come back after a slump period.

Arsenal Takes Soccer Cup By Score Of 2-0

LONDON (Reuter) — London's mighty Arsenal Gunners today overcame a stubborn Liverpool squad 2 to 0 before 100,000 rain-soaked fans in Wembley Stadium to capture the Football Association Cup, premier prize of British soccer.

Arsenal opportunism, plus the stoutest of defences which refused to crack before a sustained second-half drive by the Merseysiders, won the day for the local club.

It was Arsenal's third cup triumph and, as in 1930 and 1936, the King presented the famed trophy to the London eleven. Liverpool has yet to win the honor.

Women Weep As Murdered Girl Buried

SHEERNESS, Kent, Eng. (CP) — Weeping women lined the streets of this south coast town Friday as a funeral hearse with a tiny white coffin drove slowly to a cemetery for the burial of three-year-old Pamela Poirier, found buried in woods near here this week after an eight-day search by troops and police.

Neighbors stood bareheaded as the coffin was brought out of the small house on Victory Street here, where Pamela was born and lived until she was put in the care of foster parents last year in the tiny hamlet of Yorkletts near Canterbury.

Pamela, whose mother and father are believed to be in Canada, disappeared from the bedroom of her cottage home on the night of April 15, clad only in a thin nightdress. Police last Monday dug up the body buried among tulips two and a half miles away.

While hundreds of people stood at Pamela's graveside Friday her 35-year-old foster-father, George Gerioch Gordon, stood in the dock in a Canterbury police court, a few miles away, accused of murder. He was remanded until next Wednesday.

7 MORE FINED JAYWALKERS

Seven more citizens paid $1 fines each in police court today for jay-walking, and judging from the way tickets were being handed out today along Broad Street there will be a lot more dollars added to the court coffers.

Police repeated their warning that this action will continue until the public has been cured of crossing streets between intersections. It is illegal to jay-walk across streets in the business section in the area bounded by Herald, Government, Fort and Douglas Streets.

Emerson, Man., Flood Waters Five Feet Deep

WINNIPEG (BUP) — Premier D. L. Campbell of Manitoba said today it was too soon to decide whether the state of the southern Manitoba floods should be declared a "national emergency."

He said the government's decision would depend on the extent of damage caused so far and reports of officials handling the situation.

The premier made the statement in commenting on an Ottawa announcement that the federal government was considering aid for flood-stricken residents.

The rampaging Red, meanwhile, continued its wave of destruction. Reports from the hard-hit flood areas of Emerson, Morris, St. Jean Baptiste and Letellier today said the Red rose several inches during the last 24 hours and was still climbing.

At Morris the murky flood waters were four and one-half feet deep on the highway at the north end of the town and rising rapidly.

At Emerson, where the flood level has reached more than 46 feet above the minimum level, the main street is a "sea of muddy water." Almost five feet of water covers the main section of the town. The river was reported more than an inch over the highest point reached in the 1897 disaster and two feet above the peak set in 1948.

New Time For Up-Island Mail

Effective Monday the evening mail to up-island points will close at 4.55 pm., Postmaster J. B. Sinclair announced today.

This mail despatch was originally inaugurated to enable Victoria businessmen to get orders and correspondence away in the late afternoon for delivery up-island the following morning.

The new closing time has been made necessary because of the earlier departure of the coach which connects with the Vancouver steamer at Nanaimo.

SUMMER TIME AGAIN

Shift Of Clocks May Add Some Confusion

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

The time when some poor souls arrive an hour late for Sunday church and get all mixed up on their week-end schedules to Vancouver, is with us again.

Daylight saving time comes into effect officially at midnight tonight when you automatically move your clock ahead one hour, making it 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

Everyone loses an hour's sleep, the transportation people begin their five-month song and dance of schedule explanations to confused travelers, the golfers are happy and the farmers irate.

The C.P.R. boat to Vancouver will leave Victoria at 11.59 tonight as usual. On Sunday night and every night thereafter, while daylight saving time is in effect, the boat will shift to 10.59 standard time. That will mean 11.59, daylight saving time.

The afternoon boat which arrives in Victoria from Vancouver regularly at 2.45 standard will arrive at 3.45 daylight saving time. The boat to Vancouver in the afternoon will leave at 1.10 standard, which will be 2.10 daylight.

E. & N. railway schedules on Vancouver Island have been shifted to conform with daylight saving, although the railroad will actually operate on standard time.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines announced that its up-island buses will operate on the same schedule, converting to daylight saving. However, the evening which normally left at 6 will now leave at 5.45.

Trans Canada Air Lines will operate on standard time.

Minister Intends To Refrain From Baptizing Babies

BETHANY, Ont. (CP)—A United Church of Canada minister said today he had refused to baptize infants because of a desire "to get back to the teachings of Christ."

Rev. W. N. Crandall said in an interview that either he or the church doctrine is wrong and he feels the Bible backs his stand.

There is no record of Christ baptizing infants or that he commanded his followers to do so, said Mr. Crandall, whose charge includes 500 persons in this village 19 miles west of Peterborough and at nearby Ebenezer and Yelverton.

The Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church has asked for the resignation of Mr. Crandall, a graduate of United College, Winnipeg, and an R.C.A.F. veteran.

SIOUX RACING TO AID SICK SAILOR

Warship Carrying Doctors Expected To Rendezvous With Greek Ship Tonight

The Canadian destroyer, Sioux, is expected to rendezvous with the Greek freighter, Maria G. Coulouconunti, at 10.30 tonight, naval authorities at Esquimalt reported today.

The destroyer left her Esquimalt base at 8.20 this morning with two navy doctors, medical assistants and supplies aboard to aid a seaman on the ship believed to have a ruptured appendix.

Sioux is steaming under forced draught toward the 7,176-ton freighter which was 600 miles off Vancouver Island when she asked for medical aid at 4 this morning.

OPERATE IF NECESSARY

Surgeon Cmdr. G. W. Chapman and Surgeon Lt.-Cmdr. J. W. Green are aboard the destroyer, but a naval spokesman said it is unlikely they would operate at sea unless absolutely necessary.

"If it is at all possible to bring the man to a shore hospital where trained nurses are available, it will be done. They would likely pack him in ice and keep him absolutely still. Of course, if the appendix is ruptured, they will likely operate at sea," he said.

Cecil Ridout of King Bros. Ltd., shipping agents, said it was known Friday a crewman on the freighter was sick, and arrangements had been made to take him off at the quarantine station at William Head when the ship arrived Monday.

"Apparently his condition worsened. We were all set to bring him into a hospital in town," Mr. Ridout said.

He added the ship was bound for Crofton from Koke, Japan.

Sioux was dispatched after No. 12 Group, R.C.A.F., Vancouver, had passed on the call for aid. It was reported weather in the area was too rough to consider sending an aircraft to pick up the seaman.

So hurried was the departure of the destroyer this morning that a few of her crew were left on the jetty.

A recent issue of a naval communications book lists the name of the ship as the Maria G. Coulouconunti, but the 1947-48 edition of Lloyds' Register gives the name as Maria G. Culucundis.

The vessel, built in Portland, Ore., in 1943 as the W. W. McCrackin, is now owned by the Greek shipping firm of Rethymnis and Kulukundis.

RCMP To Take Over In B.C. By Midsummer

The R.C.M.P. will take over policing of the province from the B.C. force by midsummer, it was announced today by Attorney-General Gordon Wismer.

Mr. Wismer made the announce on his arrival home from Ottawa, where preliminary talks were held with heads of the national police force and the justice department on the changing in police forces here.

"We had most satisfactory talks," he reported, but final agreement will not be signed until after a survey of the provincial force is completed.

The Attorney-General said the R.C.M.P. was conducting the survey now under the direction of Commissioner Roger Peachey of the provincial force.

The position of every member of the B.C. force is being studied in the survey to determine what the standing will be under the Mounties's set-up.

"We don't want any of our men to be affected adversely in the change-over," said Mr. Wismer. "The survey will give us the picture we need."

The Attorney-General confirmed that headquarters of the police will not be moved from Victoria under the R.C.M.P.

He said also the Mounties will not take over provincial jails or the game department. "But they will co-operate closely with the game people."

He believed the provincial policemen will be glad the change was made after they see how it affects them.

"They will find from their own standpoint it is a good deal. I hope they will wait and see without jumping to conclusions," he said.

The National Revenue Department is going out of its way to help Joe Citizen from having to pay a fine for late filing in his income tax return for 1949.

The office was busy this morning and early this afternoon, but clerks expect the heaviest rush to come Monday, final day for filing returns.

The office Monday will be open from 9 to 5.

Anyone not getting to the office by closing tim Monday, will have to mail his return before midnight to escape the added penalty.

Snow Adds To Misery In U.S. Flood Areas

CHICAGO (UP)—Snowstorms lashed the flood-stricken northern plains today as a huge mass of cold air swept east.

The wave of cold air brought welcome rains to parched fields in the central wheat country. Some forecasters said enough precipitation might fall to break the drought which had threatened to create a new dust bowl.

In the Dakotas, blizzard conditions added to the misery in the area, already soggy from flood waters.

It snowed most of the night in western South Dakota and ranchers rounded up their livestock as the weather forecasters predicted the storm would get worse before slacking off sometime tomorrow.

Mayor A. J. Christopher of Pembina, N.D., looked out a second-story window of his home—the first floor was under two inches of Red River flood water—and said gamely that Pembina residents were "getting along all right."

'PARTICULARLY INVITING'

Sunshine Expected To Attract Record Crowds To Admire Park

Beacon Hill Park, dressed in spring-come-summer outfit, is expected to attract record crowds of Victorians and visitors on Sunday.

The weatherman has promised a sunny, mild day, and the park, an attraction to hometowner and visitor alike, is expected to play host to thousands.

"The season is two to three weeks late and everything has come along at once," W. H. Warren, parks superintendent, said today. Last week, he reported more people visited Beacon Hill than ever before at this season of the year.

"At this time of year and in late June the park is particularly inviting and should be seen by all," he said.

"To tax-minded citizens it may be interesting to note that the provision of sports fields, playground facilities, concerts and the ornamentation of the park costs the equivalent of 50 cents per capita. This is a small outlay indeed for the value received."

Flowering plums and early spring flowering cherries are just about over, also the vigorous growing single flowering Yoshino cherries, the cherry for which Washington, D.C., is famous.

For the next month, many of the ornamental types of Japanese cherries would be in bloom with attractive flowers, some single, others double, in shades from pure white to deep rose pink, Mr. Warren said.

The blending of color in the mixed beds of wallflowers is worthy of note this year.

The parks department had been experimenting for more than 15 years to perfect the mixture, he said. Featured this year are pansies. Some are beautiful types in solid colors.

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

PRINCESS' BOOK

THE visit to Victoria of Queen Mary's beautiful needlepoint carpet—which, incidentally, I saw while in Seattle earlier this week on a speaking engagement—lends timely interest to a clipping sent me from a Devonshire paper by a Victoria reader of this column.

It tells of the presentation of a handsome, illuminated book to Princess Elizabeth at Clarence House by the National Federation of Women's Institutes of Great Britain, of which the Countess of Albermarle is president. The book, which consists of 100 pages, contained contributions in the shape of illustrations, etc., from institutes all over England and Wales.

HAND-ILLUMINATED

BUT its particular interest for Canadians, apart from its character as a gift to a future Queen, lies in the fact that its text throughout was hand-lettered and illuminated by Mrs. Frances Nuttall of Budleigh Salterton, Devon.

For it was she who executed the lettering in the very beautiful book which the Women's Institutes of Britain had made and sent out here a few years ago as a good will and "thank you" gesture to the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada for what its members had done to help the Mother Country during the war years. Vancouver Island women who saw that exquisite record when it was displayed here, before being sent to Ottawa for a permanent place in the Peace Tower exhibit, will remember Mrs. Nuttall's work.

WITH QUILL PEN

FOR the gift book to the Princess, the Devon artist not only executed all the script, which is done with a quill pen, but was also responsible for the frontispiece, illuminated initials and colored motifs. The script is done with a quill pen after the styles of the old missals.

Examples of Mrs. Nuttall's script have been accepted by the Royal Household on previous occasions. Queen Mary has two beautiful specimens, one a handsome Christmas card, the other a transcript of the text of "In defence of images," by Maximus of Tyre, which was accepted by the Queen following the death of King George V.

QUEEN'S MESSAGE

THAT Devon woman's expertness in a dying craftsmanship also gives an extra emphasis to the foreword that Queen Mary wrote for the brochure which is being sold in connection with the exhibition of her beautiful carpet. It reads:

"The encouragement of British traditional craftsmanship is near to my heart. I am happy to think that my handiwork should be instrumental in furthering this cause. Mary R."

And, after having seen the Queen Mother's exquisite handiwork, I admire the more the courage which went into her own effort to encourage British traditional craftsmanship while at the same time trying to earn much-needed dollars for her country's coffers.

DOGGED DETERMINATION

FOR it took the indomitable, 82-year-old Queen Mother nearly nine years, working six to seven hours a day, to finish the carpet. She used different wools—and goodness knows how many skeins—it its making. And anyone who has ever essayed the making even of a needlepoint chair or stool cover will readily recognize the determination and stick-to-it-iveness needed to carry through an undertaking of such magnitude and magnificence.

But as I looked at the Queen's rug, I membered again that those qualities are characteristics of the British people—the people to whom, and of whom, Her Majesty has always been such a great and shining symbol.

Brother Scots Meet After 31 Years

Douglas Moodie, 81, of 2733 Blackwood Street, right, and visiting brother, 79-year-old James, from Dundee, Scotland, meet after 31 years. Last time they met was when Douglas, retired army and navy veteran, went overseas during First World War. Visiting brother is retired railroad engineer and will leave Sunday to return to his native Scotland.

'Closed' Borstal Urged By Appeal Court Judge

Barred Windows Said More Suitable To Train Certain Types Of Offenders

Mr. Justice C. H. O'Halloran in Appeal Court Friday suggested a "closed-type" Borstal for certain offenders.

Commenting on the appeals of two Vancouver youths who escaped from New Haven, the justice felt there should be a "closed school" for training offenders who were not suited to attend the "open" Borstal.

He pointed out that in England there are several steps in Borstal training. The system there included "a closed" type Borstal for the type of youth who needed stricter training.

The "open" Borstal system at New Haven is a splendid idea, said the justice, "but you can't build Rome in a day."

The two youths before the court were Kenneth Allan Floyd, 18, and David Ansel, who were both convicted of breaking and entering charges in Vancouver. Theye were sent to "New Haven" for training, but escaped from the Borstal school.

Appeal Court dismissed the appeals of the two youths, but reduced the sentence imposed upon Floyd.

Fire Dangers Pointed Out To Architects

"Stop constructing buildings to burn, because that is what you are doing," Fire Chief Robert T. Brindle told a round-table conference called by Victoria Chapter of the Architectural Insitute of Canada in the Union Club Friday night.

The chief and J. W. Oosterink, city building inspector, were invited to try to iron out difficulties the architects are experiencing with interpretation of the city building code.

Instances in Victoria where oil furnaces and stoves have been installed without permits were cited by Mr. Brindle, who urged the architects to be fire-conscious. He said oil burning installations had increased tremendously and people were supposed to take out permits.

Local architects have found difficulty interpreting the building code and its many amendments and as a result costly changes have had to be made in plans. F. W. Nicholls, president of the local chapter, asked Mr. Oosterink how architects were supposed to interpret the code.

The later suggested all points brought up by the chapter be noted in a letter and forwarded to him for review. If they did not agree, the matter would have to be thashed out.

Why should we leave these things to logical interpretations: let's get them into the code," urged Ralph Coles, secretary, referring to certain things in the building code which could be explained but were not written into the code.

Esquimalt Tax Rate To Hold

The 1950 mill rate in Esquimalt will be set by the municipal council Monday night.

It is expected councillors will fix the rate at 45 mills the same level as in 1949.

Council is shelving a number of planned public work projects in an effort to keep the tax level from creeping up over last year's. Some of the projects may be undertaken if and when the municipality receives a federal government grant to compensate for taxes lost through vast holdings by the Department of National Defence.

Such a grant was promised in November, 1949.

Pearson Warns Of 'Phony Overtures

Must Not Be Fooled By Empty Words Of Reds, Says Minister

MONTREAL (CP)—The western nations must not be fooled by any "phony peace overtures" from the Russians, External Affairs Minister Pearson said today.

"We must refuse to be led astray by empty words of those who talk of peace but who make no other proposal for safeguarding it except to recommend that we unilaterally disarm," he said in an address prepared for delivery to the Reform Club.

He added: "We must not be fooled, ever, by any phony peace overtures."

Mr. Pearson criticized Dr. James Endicott, head of the Canadian Peace Congress, for statements he made while on a trip to Russia last month.

He read excerpts from Moscow newspapers quoting Dr. Endicott as saying:

1. While Moscow represented peace, in Canada airfields and military bases were being built instead of apartment houses and "dirty booklets praise the future war."

2. If a Canadian refers to Russia "in a positive manner" in his home, the police may drive him into the street and seal off his apartment.

"A man who, professing honest motives and high ideals, goes amongst strangers and maligns his country with this kind of falsehood is beneath contempt," said Mr. Pearson. "In a Communist society, he would also be beneath the ground."

Mr. Pearson said the head of Russia's internal security program—Lavrenti Beria—recently had announced a program of action for Communsts, which was one of "stirring up trouble in this country and elsewhere in the western world."

"It is being carried out," he said. "In many ways—by the Cominform, by Communist parties in all western states, and often by secret agents, as we have seen in our own country."

MOTORIST FINED $40

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Mayor J. Lewis Sangster reports revenue from city-owned light department and other utilities together with city grants could run the city "maybe within four years."

Victoria Helps Campaign For New Arthritic Drug

One of the most intensive research projects in medical history now is under way to determine the value and increase production of the new drugs ACTH and cortisone, which are used for treating arthritis and allied diseases.

Canadian doctors are playing a prominent role in this research work and some of the funds raised in the current nation-wide appeal will be used to press this work even further.

Tests with these drugs have shown outstanding results, although like insulin in the treatment of diabetes, they must be used continuously and cannot be regarded as a cure.

Supplies of these drugs are so limited at present that their use is restricted to doctors for research purposes only.

ACTH drug is a hormone obtained from the pituitary glands of hogs. It is estimated that 400,000 hogs produce only one pound of the drug, enough for 200 patients for a single day.

Cortisone is even scarcer. It is obtained from the bile of butchered cattle and requires 37 tedious steps to make.

The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society is currently engaged in a Dominion-wide appeal for more funds for research work in this drug field. The Victoria objective is $12,000. Campaign headquarters are in the Miller Block, 1006 Government Street.

ALL-INDIAN CONCERT

Attractive Children In Play At St. Ann's

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Picturesquely costumed and acted with an affecting simplicity, the story of "Tekakwitha's Rosary" climaxed a widely varied all-Indian concert presented in St. Ann's Academy auditorium, Friday night.

The drama was presented by a group of attractive young people from the Indian C.Y.O., Guadalupe Chapter of Saanich. The cast included Ann Elliott as a charming Tekakwitha (The Little One), tiny doll-like Christine Samson as her six-year-old counterpart, Marie Cooper, Dorothy Paul and Philip and Jackie Paul.

In complete contrast, was the comedy, "The Life for Mother," presented by the Kuper Island School. The players were Laura Pierre, Lilyan Antone, John Fallardeau, Kenneth Sam, Martin Modest and Molly George.

Another amusing sketch was "Schooklays." This was directed and acted by Louise Underwood as the teacher, and Theresa Alphonse, Ruby Alphonse, Catherine Alphonse, Saide Johnnie, Philomena Wilson, Janie Underwood, Audrey Underwood, Shirley Thorne, Norma Pelkey, Florence Pelkey, Joan Charlie and Ida Paul, as pupils.

Two pupils of St. Ann's, Joyce Moody and Janet Paul, presented a spirited Hungarian dance. Director was Miss Irene Nagy. Choirs from Kuper Island School, Saanich (Guadalupe) and Duncan (Tekakwitha Indian Girls' Club), provided the musical part of the program. An hilarious dual lecture on cooking fish and catching men, was given by Ann Elliott and Mary Tom of the C.Y.O.

Janie Underwood, president of the Duncan Tekakwitha Girls' Club, presented a silver cup, donated by the club, to Philomena Wilson, winner of a recent catechism competition.

Closing address was given by Dr. Clifford Carl, director of the Provincial Museum.

"GIVE ME HEALTH and a day and I will make the pomp of emperors ridiculous" was Ralph Waldo Emerson's terse, but eloquent opinion of the value of health. Oklahoma, Texas Tornadoes Kill 12

Red Cross, Taking Steps, Declares One Large District Disaster Area

HOLDENVILLE, Okla. (UP)—At least 12 persons were dead today from a series of tornadoes which slashed across central Oklahoma and West Texas Friday night.

Five of the known dead were here in central Oklahoma where a tornado let down at the southwest edge of Hodenville, skipping and twisting over an area 18 blocks long and a half-block to three blocks wide.

Five persons were killed in Callahan County, Texas—three from one family in the little town of Clyde and two others nears the town of Baird.

A Sentinel, Okla., banker collapsed apparently of a heart attack shortly after telephoning a frantic warning to his wife that a tornado was approaching the town, in southwestern Oklahoma. At Hobart, a 65-year-old man was killed when the same twister destroyed his home.

18 IN HOSPITAL

Holdenville was the heaviest hit. The Red Cross declared the city of 7,000 a disaster area.

Eighteen persons were hospitalized here with stor minjuries. At least three were in critical condition.

Oklahoma highway patrolman O. L. Nickerson reported the number of injured may be more than 40 when all reports are in.

Sixty homes in one 10-block area were destroyed. But by dawn all persons had been accounted for. In the first hours of confusion Friday night, four were listed as missing.

In west Texas, a 100-mile strip ranging from Haskell southward to the Clyde-Baird area not far from the plains city of Abilene, was buffeted by winds and beaten by hail.

At several points, hailstones were said to have been "big as baseballs."

N.S. Coal Mine Sealed Off To Check Flames

STELLARTON, N.S. (CP)—The Allan shaft coal mine here was sealed off with sand and timber today in an effort to check a raging fire which Friday threatened the lives of seven trapped miners.

Hospital authorities at nearby New Glasgow today reported all seven men were on the danger list. They were seriously burned in the blast that set off the fire.

Most seriously injured were James Johnston, Stellarton town councillor, and Brenton Yuill. The others are George Porter, Bert Vacherese, Eugene Davidson, William Petelka and N. B. Dorrington. Suffering from shock are Petelka and Dorrington, the last two to be brought out after rescue crews went into the depths.

Officials of the Nova Scotia Mines Department, who arrived at the scene late Friday night, today began preliminary investigation into the cause of the explosion.

As anxious relatives swarmed around the pithead the survivors came up — their clothes ripped and burned and their flesh seared by the terrific blast of unknown origin at the 1,200-foot level.

FEW VOICE APPROVAL

Hoover's U.N. Proposal Brings Condemnation

By CANADIAN PRESS

Former President Herbert Hoover's proposal that the United Nations be revamped without Russia gained little approval throughout the world, a survey showed today.

Most responsible government officials refrained from comment.

Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo said the U.N., with Russia in it, is the "only workable bridge that we have today between the two hostile camps on either side of the chasm."

Vladimir Houdek, permanent delegate from Communist Czechoslovakia, said the Russian-bloc countries, who have been boycotting the U.N. over the question of Chinese Nationalist representation, are not going to "quit the U.N."

Houdek's statement at a press conference was the first reaction from one of the countries which Hoover's proposal would exclude.

British diplomatic sources said the idea "would not be looked on favorably" in that country. They said the U.N. still serves a useful purpose as a point of contact among all countries.

The French Foreign Office, after studying Hoover's suggestion for six hours, decided not to comment.

T. F. Hsiang, chief delegate of Nationalist China, said the world "is not quite ready for such a drastic proposal, but the pressure of world events will eventually drive us to accept Mr. Hoover's proposal."

From Cairo came one of the strongest expressions of disapproval.

"Ousting the Communist nations from the United Nations would be the surest way to transform the cold war into a shooting war," said an unofficial but representative source.

Australian newspapers scarcely mentioned the plan.

Death For Reds In Malaya

SINGAPORE (CP) — The Malayan government today put still more teeth in its anti-Communist campaign by providing the death penalty for Communist agents. Until now only armed terrorists have been liable to the extreme penalty.

The latest government move came on the heels of an attempt on the life of Singapore's governor, Sir Franklin Gimson.

General Election Called Over Belgium's Monarch

BRUSSELS (UP)—Prince Regent Charles today dissolved the Belgian parliament, making a general election necessary in the dispute over the return of King Leopold to the Belgian Throne.

The crisis over the King's return headed toward a climax early today when Paul van Zeeland, a pro-Leopold Social Christian (Catholic) Party leader, announced his resignation.

Van Zeeland tried fruitlessly for 25 days to form a government and evolve a compromise on Leopold's return. His failure was based on two main factors:

1. Objection by the Socialist Party to Leopold remaining in Belgium after delegating his powers to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin. Leopold had agreed to surrender his powers after 18 days, but refused to make any specific agreement to go abroad again.

2. The Liberal Party was willing to let Leopold remain in Belgium after delegating his powers to his son, but Liberal leaders refused to accept Van Zeeland as Premier.

RETIREMENT AGE DISCUSSED

Senators Weigh New Proposals For Reform Of Their Chamber

By GORDON E. LEIGHTON
Times Ottawa Representative

OTTAWA—Numerous placards plastered for all to see at the Senate entrance to Parliament, give notice to all and sundry the upper chamber intends to be busy. Reform is in the air.

They reflect a determination, perhaps new, perhaps not, to bring about a general realization of the value of the Senate in the legislative structure. Stung not so much by criticism as it would appear by the absence of it, Senators are exhibiting a driving force belying the casual reputation of the past.

Their own members description of them as "the highest class of pensioners"; their own admitted failure to "make the headlines" in the newspapers spurs on this evidence of life. They are called by plain and public notice to a sense of their duties as soon as they reach their portals.

Their committee responsibilities are blatantly paraded before them. This week, for instance, consideration has been given to Old Age Security — meaning mostly the devising of a plan for contributory old age pensions, no mean job in itself. External affairs, finance, immigration and labor, divorce, private bills, human rights and fundamental freedoms are calling to the members for consideration and action.

IN THE AIR

All these aside from the normal deliberative functions within their chamber, the passage of bills and the sanction of Commons legislation. But as we say "Reform is in the air." Not a new phenomenon but an earnest one this time.

Suggestions of reform to make the Senate a more active and influential body come from within as well as from without. The government leader, W. McL. Robertson, has thrown out broad hints of an age limit of retirement. Senator Lambert in a detailed review of the situation comes out with a suggested period of eight to ten years of appointment only.

Others in view of the provincial basis of representation suggest the provincial authorities have more say in the selections. Others of course are brutal enough to condemn the Senate as outmoded and unnecessary and to suggest its abolition.

At the present time it is overwhelmingly partisan with 75 of the 102 members professing the Liberal faith. Of the remaining seats there are 14 vacancies, leaving an official opposition of but 13. Should the vacancies be filled on the customary bases of appointments, the government side would number 89.

What's Happening In Spain?

RUMORS OF AN IMPENDING TRADE deal between Soviet Russia and Spain bring into sharper relief the statement by Canada's External Affairs Minister, Hon. Lester B. Pearson yesterday that there is no change in sight in Canadian diplomatic relations with Spain. Whether or not Mr. Pearson's supplementary announcement—that this Dominion proposed to send diplomatic missions to two foreign capitals where Canada does not already have representatives—referred in any way to Madrid was not explained in the text of the news story.

A little less than one year ago, Canada, as a member of the U.N., abstained from voting on a Bolivian motion which would have re-established full diplomatic relations with Spain. The South American resolution was defeated at that time. It would have repealed the 1946 U.N. recommendation that all member nations of the world body withdraw top diplomatic representatives from the Spanish capital. What new elements may have entered the Iberian picture in the last few months—other than the favorable reports from some U.S. congressmen and other American visitors who have journeyed to that country—we do not know.

The whole shabby story of Franco, however, remains fresh in mind. Even the carnage and horrors of the Second World War have not obliterated the recollection of the paunchy little dictator's actions against the republicans of his country. Nor did his wartime position add anything to the stature of a Spanish regime which was openly friendly to the Germans and which showed no hesitation in making western nations eat crow when the sore-pressed allies were forced to exert every effort to keep Spain neutral. It is generally accepted, moreover, that Franco was restrained from throwing in his lot with the Nazis only through uncertainty over their eventual victory.

These are memories which will not down when discussions turn to possible new relations with Spain. Conceivably it may be necessary, or expedient, to modify the Canadian official attitude toward the last of Europe's three fascist dictators. Reports of Soviet negotiations for a trade agreement with Franco may suggest the desirability of securing from him some of the resources which major powers need. The need, however, would have to be very great before such action won the support of the Canadian people.

No Credit To Them

OUTCOME OF THE INVESTIGATION that has been ordered into the riots staged by thousands of New York school children will be awaited by all who are interested in the trends being exhibited by youth in modern cities as a result of their exposure to urban life.

Apparently initiated as a demonstration in support of a demand for higher teachers' salaries, the unruly parades and gatherings have extended over several days. But the numbers involved—news reports estimated Thursday's crowds at 10,000—suggest that some co-ordinating influence has been at work to organize the children of many widely separated schools. The problem developed when students found their after-school activities curtailed by the refusal of teachers to conduct them unless wage increases were granted by the city. It seems hardly logical that 10,000 of them would be moved spontaneously to congregate as they did. Whatever agency may have encouraged the incidents, or whether the students themselves were responsible, the boys and girls who took part have brought little credit upon themselves, their schools or their homes.

Their mass disrespect for authority, evidenced by violence, overturning of cars, hooting at police, and similar irresponsible acts, has given them a taste of lawlessness that they would have been better without. No citizenship has been learned by such actions, no better appreciation of democracy, no strengthening of the ideals which make their country a favored one in the world today. The youngsters have been badly advised, badly led and badly oriented. One wonders at the attitude toward such rowdyism which may exist in the 10,000 homes involved. It is to be hoped that Mayor O'Dwyer's investigation will get to the heart of the matter.

Another Word In Support

THE LONG-DISPUTED ST. Lawrence Seaway Plan, which many have despaired of ever seeing implemented, has received another measure of encouragement from U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson. The American diplomat urged co-operation with Canada in carrying out the project when he appeared this week before a House of Representatives public works committee, terming such a partnership of "the utmost importance." The waterway scheme of course, envisions a joint development of the St. Lawrence basin by both countries, resulting in increased hydro-electric power production and an opening of traffic into the centre of the continent for ocean-going ships. The huge enterprise, entailing years of construction and a joint cost of many millions of dollars, has been studied and advocated for several decades. Commercial and industrial interests in Canada and the United States have opposed it on the grounds that it would seriously upset existing economic conditions for seaports and land routes that would be affected. On the other hand, the power and transport problem of the future, not to mention the value of the project from the point of view of military defence, should ultimately swing the balance in favor of the plan. There is no thought that the opposition will be lightly overcome, but Mr. Acheson's support, and his emphasis on the importance of co-operation between the two great North American nations, will carry weight.

Anniversary Of 'Wanton Attack' Recalls Need To Stay Vigilant

News of Norway

"GENERALLY speaking one of the blessings of human beings is the ability to forget. But if thoughtlessly applied it may also be a danger. There are certain things which we may forget only at our own peril."

Norway's Ambassador to the United States, Wilhelm Morgenstierne, sounded this warning note in his statement commemorating "the sudden, wanton attack on Norway by the Nazi aggressors" 10 years ago this month.

"It was an event," said the Ambassador, "which Norwegians today and those who come after us will always keep alive in their minds, because it was a deeply tragic proof of the old saying that nobody has peace longer than his neighbor wants."

REALLY MATTERED

"We in Norway," continued Ambassador Morgenstierne, "had been thinking that the well-being and the cultural and spiritual development of the people, the whole people, was the thing that really mattered. That schools and hospitals and decent homes for human beings were more important than guns and tanks, warships and planes.

We were rather proud, I hope not too much so, to have given the world leaders in many fields of human endeavor: Henrik Ibsen, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, Sigrid Undset, Fridtjof Nansen, Roald Amundsen, Edvard Grieg, Christian Sinding and many others.

We were rather pleased with the world-wide standing of our sailors and Merchant Marine, our industrial and commercial expansion, our fisheries and whaling, our educational system and our social and economic reforms. We were living in peace and friendship with all nations—we were the dispensor of the Nobel Peace Prize."

Then suddenly, without warning, in the dead of night, Germany struck!

"For two months the Norwegian military forces under the leadership of King Haakon and the legal Norwegian Government fought the invaders on Norwegian soil. When early in June 1940 our British, French and Polish allies had to withdraw their forces from Norway owing to military developments in France and Britain, the Norwegians could not stand up alone against the overwhelming forces of the mechanized barbarians. King Haakon and his cabinet were forced to leave the country in order to continue the fight for Norway's liberation from London, where they had been warmly welcomed by our ally and friend, Great Britain."

The Ambassador emphasized that the Norwegian Government in London, 1940-45, was not a group arbitrarily established in an emergency to carry on for its country—not a "Government in Exile" in the ordinary sense—but a genuinely constitutional government with full powers to represent legally and constitutionally the Norwegian people for the duration of the war. This was so because the Norwegian Parliament (the Storting) had been able to meet twice after the invasion of Norway, and, in full accordance with the constitution, had transferred to the Government the legislative powers of the Parliament and the general authorization to carry on until Parliament could once more assemble in a liberated Norway.

FULLY RECOGNIZED

"This fact," the Ambassador stated, "was fully recognized by the civilized world . . . and it gave King Haakon and his Government—and the Norwegian people—a tremendous advantage."

Ambassador Morgenstierne recalled that shortly after the occupation of Norway he had expressed these feelings to the American press:

"There is something called Divine Providence. . . . Spiritual values cannot be downed permanently. Human liberty, freedom of religion, of speech, and of the press, government of the people and for the people, human decency and brotherly love, our whole way of living—these may be blacked out temporarily, but they are hard-won, permanent values which will assert themselves as surely as day follows night. . . . The sun will rise again over a free, independent Norway."

"And," he said, "it happened just that way. . . Hitler and his cohorts met their inevitable doom."

A BIG LITTLE MUDDLE

THIS week we have seen the chairman of the U.S. Foreign Relations Committee reject as "astounding" a "British proposal"—which has not been proposed—that he assumed is embodied in a memorandum—which he had not read. This fine little muddle has to do with a very big subject: the relation between recovery in Europe and progress in Asia.

THE muddle is the joint product of the Labor government in London and of the Truman administration in Washington. What happened in brief was this: Last September at the meetings in Washington which preceded the devaluation of the currencies, there was an agreement by Britain, Canada and the United States to study together the problem of the sterling balances, that is to say the problem of Britain's war debt to Egypt, India, Pakistan and some other countries of Asia. This study, which is of the greatest consequence to the whole world, has been handled with the utmost bureaucratic inertia and clumsiness. Seven months have passed. The mountain has labored. The British have produced a memorandum. The memorandum produced not a considered American comment. It produced a leak in London to a London newspaper. This leak was then followed up here, not by the publication of the memorandum but by more leaks from American sources.

THERE is no use being astounded because there is a connection between our aid to Britain and Britain's capacity to repay her war debt in Asia. The connection exists and it has always existed. The British could not export to Asia to pay off their debt if America did not make exports to Britain that Britain did not have to pay for.

The fact of the matter is that the British repayment of sterling balances to southern Asia has been a great and a necessary contribution to the establishment of India and Pakistan as independent states. Whatever the disadvantages of the operation—and there have been many—the condition of non-Communist Asia would be much worse than it is if this financial support had not been given. The condition would deteriorate rapidly and dangerously if this support were now cut off. The future will be much worse than it needs to be if the British and the Americans do not find a way to continue that support and to enlarge it somewhat.

BUT at least it is possible to clear away some of the prejudices which stand in the way of the consideration of any constructive solution. One way to begin to do that is to deal with the notion, apparently Senator Connally's, that the British have invented a new scheme for making the United States shoulder their war debts. They have not. They have explained once again what everyone who ever looked at the question for 10 minutes has always known: that they have been making heavy repayments of their sterling balances to India, Pakistan, Egypt and south Asia which they could not have made if they had not received Marshall aid from the United States.

THAT is what the shouting is all about. It is not a British plot to make the United States pay their debts. It is not a British plot to wangle some more dollars. It is really a statement of the obvious and undeniable fact that if southern Asia is to get the help it needs and deserves, that help must come—because it can come only—from the advanced industrial countries of the west. And it stands to reason that the two countries which have to take the initiative in making a plan for contributing to the development of southern Asia must be the two peoples now most involved in the financial problems of southern Asia—that is to say the British who are directly involved through the sterling balances, and the United States which is involved indirectly through the Marshall plan.

As Our Readers See It

THE QUEEN'S CARPET

It seems almost akin to sacrilege that the Queen Mother's priceless work must be sold to obtain a few paltry dollars for the hard-pressed Old Country.

Would it not be a nice gesture if we, in Canada, and our friends in U.S.A., were to raise a subscription instead, to make the Old Country a present of the necessary dollars, and to send the carpet back to become a permanent exhibit in the British Museum, or some such suitable place in London? Perhaps the newspapers would act as subscription and publicity centres, aided by service and other clubs who are interested.

I would like to subscribe the first dollar towards this worthy cause; and, incidentally, to thank the Provincial Government, and the I.O.D.E., for making the exhibit of the carpet possible in this city.

CLAIMS IMPROVEMENT

In spite of the arguments advanced by E. A. Holt in a recent letter to your newspaper, there is very little doubt that the handling of the liquor business in American cities is a great improvement over former methods and over the present system in this province. Montreal is a Canadian example that could be quoted, but the United States picture is the one that Mr. Holt undertook to discuss.

It would be very enlightening to know if Mr. Holt is familiar with the American situation. Does he know the "dry" areas of that country, for example? Does he know that some states permit private sale of liquor under license while others have only government liquor stores? And that liquor is prohibited entirely in others?

This writer is well aware of the troubles in Los Angeles. But does Mr. Holt know that the "appalling" situation he quotes arises chiefly from arrests made on the "Skid Road," where admittedly most of the victims are hopeless?

Ordinary citizens in that great metropolis deplore those conditions, but so do they deplore teen-age hoodlums and other menaces—even as such citizens do in Canada. The same remarks, incidentally, apply to New York. No thinking person favors the abuse of drinking, or anything else, but we would appreciate a fair analysis occasionally.

Long experience in the United States (my own home is in San Francisco, where you can buy liquor in any downtown block) proves that liquor can be controlled and regulated but not eliminated. In the U.S. it is a legal industry under strict government supervision. The industry pays more taxes than any other product, employs well over a million workers directly and makes jobs for many more in several hundred other businesses.

Better have it that way than under the starry-eyed dreamers and irresponsible fanatics who tried their hand at it once before, to the great delight of the Capones and their ilk. VISITOR.

SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGN

May we, through the medium of the Victoria Daily Times, express our sincerest thanks to all those who made the Red Cross Campaign recently completed such an unqualified success. The objective of $65,000 was exceeded by an appreciable amount and this splendid showing is due to the effort put into the campaign by the many workers and to the generous contributions by the citizens of Greater Victoria to this great work of mercy.

It has not been possible to thank every worker individually but, to each of you who participated, we would ask you to accept this as a personal "Thank you" for your contribution. The people of Greater Victoria have never failed to meet the quota set for this district, indicating sympathetic interest in the work of the Red Cross Society.

Following Wrong Idea May Result In Production Of Correct Remedy

Australian News Letter

A DISCOVERY that common table salt swiftly cures the mysterious pink disease which baffled the medical world for 140 years was made by two South Australian medical men—25-year-old Dr. Donald Cheek and Sir Stanton Hicks, Professor of Human Physiology and Pharmacology at the Adelaide University.

About 80 cases a year had been occurring in South Australia and the death rate at the Adelaide Children's Hospital was 10 per cent.

FAULTY GLAND

Dr. Cheek and Sir Stanton Hicks showed that leakage of salt from the system in pink disease was due to faulty functioning of the superarenal gland. Ensuring that babies receive salt in milk during early months of life is now expected to wipe out this disease.

The most spectacular case was that of a 10-months-old boy, who was unconscious and dying. Here, because speed was vital, the salt, instead of being given by mouth, was put into a vein in solution by continuous drips. Within two days the child was sitting up.

Sir Santon Hicks was prompt to warn parents not to try to use the remedy except under medical direction.

The discovery, he said, illustrated the ever-increasing demand for active research centres.

"Dr. Cheek was driven by the wrong idea but got the right answer," he said. He uncovered important facts which I was able at once to interpret only because I was engaged in research."

Paying a tribute to Dr. Cheek, the professor said the discovery of the cure for the previously mysterious disease illustrated the fact that should be impressed on everybody that "enthusiastic tenacity in pursuing a piece of work, plus the presence in a community of active research centres, makes discoveries possible."

GETS RESULTS

It did not matter if results came from pursuing wrong ideas.

"Nearly all the discoveries that have ever been made have come from following the wrong thing," continued Sir Stanton Hicks.

"Research can be achieved only with extremely hard work. There must be active research centres all the time fermenting."

POPULAR MOVE?

Ottawa Journal

It was intimated a year ago that the Dominion government might amend the legislation on public holidays to provide for Monday observance of Victoria Day and Dominion Day—Civic Holiday and Labor Day already and always fall on Monday and, latterly, Thanksgiving. Nothing was done last session, but there remains time for Parliament to act before May 24 if it sees fit. It would be a popular move, and, we think, a sensible one.

CLIPPED at RANDOM

POLITICIAN PENSIONS

Ottawa Journal

Mostly our cabinet ministers, Dominion and provincial, are men of little or no wealth. It is unfair to have them give the best of their lives to the public service and then when the hazards of politics send them into the wilderness or age or failing health removes them from the political scene to leave them to their own fates or devices.

FEDERAL CONCERN TOO

Toronto Globe and Mail

Whatever may be said of the effectiveness of British Columbia justice in dealing with the Doukhobor problem, this business is a concern of all authority. Organized violence sets up a chain reaction wherever it occurs. If one sect gets away with it in one part, sooner or later another sect somewhere else will try the same tactics.

A survey can be useful only if it forms the basis for a policy and is followed up with vigorous action. If there are honest grievances, let them be righted. If there has been too much laxity, let it be corrected. This problem with its recurrent guerrillaism in the Kootenays has got to be cleaned up.

THE USES OF DOORS

New York Times

A door, says the dictonary, is a hinged or sliding frame used for closing or opening an entrance or exit, as to a house. A door is useful; it cuts one off from the clamoring world, from glib-tongued peddlers of worthless trinkets. If need be, it can stand silent and unmoving as some unwelcome would-be guest, his approach having been covertly observed, hammers upon it vainly begging entry. On the other hand, it can be thrown open with a flourish to greet long-absent friends or rich uncles. A wife learns to listen to the sound of its closing at the work day's end for a clue to her bread-winner's mood. A door keeps out the cold, discourages invasions by stray dogs and cats, and if its does not always bar curious little children this is not the fault of the door. A door is a good thing to have.

'A SCRUFFY LOT'

Montreal Star

Tailor and Cutter, a London publication, not long ago was advocating loose balloon ties and scarlet sashes for men's evening wear. It has now come out with a statement similarly provocative. It announces revision of its opinion about newspapermen. It is no longer proper to regard journalists "and particularly editors" as "a bunch of scruffs."

Not having realized we were so scruffy, we have no time now to get insulted at the idea that we once were. We may take pride in the fact that we pass the rigorous tests imposed by Taylor and Cutter. But let us give fair warning. On the rare occasions when we don evening wear (and we don't mean pyjamas) those loose, flowing blousy ties are out, and as for that scarlet sash wound round our middles—nix. Our middles are bad enough the way they are. We don't propose to draw attention to them.

Ups And Downs

By BRIAN A. TOBIN

"EVERYTHING," said the Elevator Man, "seems to be working backwards these days. Science is becoming ingrown. We're getting alarm clocks that only ring in a whisper so as not to disturb us. We have electric stoves that are so well insulated they don't give out any heat. They've developed a dog that has no bark, swimming suits you can't go swimming in, and an automatic wheel-chair to save you the bother of walking around the golf links. We've even got drinks that give us a thirst, instead of quenching it, and food that's guaranteed to keep us thin. It's hard to say where it'll end. Going down!

"I guess, though," said the Elevator Man, "it's nothing new in principle. We've always had things like that—explanations that complicate questions instead of clearing them up, group leaders who lag behind the crowd instead of leading, women's clothes that expose instead of covering—we've been working against ourselves for a long time. The funny thing is, nobody seems to mind. We develop an instrument that will keep perfect time, then we deliberately set it an hour wrong all summer. We turn out cars that can go 100 miles an hour, and then make it illegal to go more than 30. In the States, thousands of government workers are out showing the farmers how to grow more food per acre. Other thousands are out buying up the crops and burning them or giving them away. We're all busy—cancelling out the other fellow. Watch the step!

"It even," said the Elevator Man, "extends to international affairs. Countries used to declare war and fight. Then they took to waging wars without declaring 'em. Now they neither declare 'em nor wage 'em, they just have 'em, in a sort of frozen state. Instead of sending an expeditionary force over to the enemy country, you call your men home, from the embassies and consulates. And if it comes to a shooting war, you find when it's over you've been killing off the customers for your own produce. We'd better all get together on this before things are completely gummed up."

RELUCTANT bride-to-be is Mireya Urgidi, 22-year-old Bolivian now attending Tulsa, Okla., has asked for U.S. refuge rather than go home and obey father's orders to marry wealthy diplomat friend of family who is twice her age. Now on student's visa which expires June 30, young beauty appealed to U.S. Naturalization Office for help. (NEA Photo.)

Shutdown Delays Opening Date For New Building

There is little likelihood the new provincial government office building opposite the Legislative Buildings on the east side of Government Street will be ready for occupancy before next spring.

Public works officials said Friday it had been planned to have the building open next winter but the building shutdown has thrown plans out of kilter.

The new building will house a large cafeteria for government employees, in addition to public works and other offices. The cafeteria will take the place of the present facilities off the Speaker's corridor at the rear of the buildings. Closed since the Legislature prorogued, the present cafeteria is scheduled to be reopened May 3.

When the new cafeteria is opened it will be operated continuously, it was leaned.

Leaving Faded Blooms Saps Plant's Vitality

By JACK G. BEASTALL

While we grow flowering plants to beautify our surroundings and satisfy our esthetic sense, we must not forget that the plants themselves have other ideas.

Their sole aim is the reproduction of their kind, and they produce the flower as a means to that end. Yet this natural instinct can be detrimental to the existing plant in as much as when it has set seed its purpose has been fulfilled.

If we remove the blooms soon after pollination the plant will supply some flowers in an effort to produce seed. By making use of this trait it is possible for us to extend the flowering season of many subjects.

Gardeners tend to leave faded blooms too long before removing them and thereby waste some of the plant's vitality. The flowers actually start fading immediately after the pollination, and within a few days the seed capsule starts to swell. This is the time to remove the blooms.

This week-end look over your narcissi and remove all flowers showing a large seed capsule. Just nip off one inch of stem. The energy which would have been used on seed will then go into producing a better bulb for next year.

Primulas will also need checking over. Remove the spent blooms individually if necessary. Pansies should be treated likewise if you wish continuous bloom. Certain heathers have completed flowering and the plants are ready to be trimmed. Where a large planting is involved they may be neatly trimmed with hedge shears. Aim at a well rounded, symmetrical plant.

The beautiful golden bells of the Forsythia, which have graced our gardens for the past month, will soon be over. Shoots which have flowered should be cut off about half way along the flowering portion. Shrubs which contain many hard, woody stems and bear few flowers, may be brought into bloom again by removing some of this old wood. This will encourage new shoots from the base; and as these increase in number, a little more old stock may be removed each year.

Rally To Be Held In United Church

A rally will be held in Metropolitan United Church Tuesday evening at 8.

A team of five graduates from the United Church Christian Leadership Training School at Naramata, B.C., will provide the program.

The team wil be introduced by Education Minister, W. T. Straith. The song service will be led by the Salvation Army band.

24 Seattle Lions Visit City Club

Lions International took on a firmer meaning to members of the local club at their weekly luncheon meeting at the Empress Hotel Friday.

They had just settled down to luncheon when 24 men walked through the side door of the grill room. They were all members of the West Seattle Lions Club. The visitors were greeted in true Lion fashion and entertainment was at its highest as Canada and U.S. exchanged yarns.

In connection with the forthcoming display by the Danish gym team at the Memorial Arena April 11 under the auspices of the Lions Club, a color film was shown by Dr. G. Clifford Carl. The film dealt with the team's visit to Mexico, Cuba, the U.S. and Canada.

Toronto Preacher

Rev. W. J. Gallagher, M.A., D.D., general secretary of the Canadian Council of Churches with headquarters in Toronto, will be the speaker at the regular service at Metropolitan United Church Sunday night, commencing at 7.30.

He will deal with the subject which is engaging the attention of both the United and Anglican churches—the reaching of a common ground for merging their congregations.

THE VOICE OF ONE . . .

Sense Of Humor, Lost, Badly Needed Today

By FRANK S. MORLEY

Some day I shall put an advertisement in the paper, "Lost—a Sense of Humor. Finder kindly return to the general public." It is difficult to say anything humorously without being taken in grim earnest.

"Walk I will not," said the philosopher Boehme, "with a man who frowns on laughter." Nor will I; such a man is a potential Torquemada. The best and greatest men I have known have a sense of humor broad and hearty. Abraham Lincoln during a critical period of the Civil War read to his shocked cabinet some side-splitting humor of Artemus Ward. He implored his humorless henchmen, "Gentlemen, why don't you laugh? I should die if I did not laugh occasionally."

F. S. Morley

Remember how the rumbling, heroic laughter of Churchill rang round the world in the dark night of war, "Some chicken! Some neck!" and Hitler was licked from that hour. Or Roosevelt, king of story tellers.

Should there be humor in the pulpit? In Puritan churches people were put in the stocks for smiling, but this was Puritanism in decline. A revival of religion is always accompanied by a sense of humor. Thus the Reformation was preceded by great bundles of wit in men like Crotus Rubianus, Ulrich von Hutten, the authors of "Epistles of Obscure Men," Boccaccio's "Decameron," and Erasmus' gem, "In Praise of Folley." How shattering to feudalism was Cervante's "Don Quiote!"

Thus the most hopeful sign of the decline of Communism is its complete loss of a sense of humor. A Communist wedding in Shanghai the other day celebrated a wedding "rich in educational meaning." There were no gifts, but guests paid five cents each at the door for refreshments. The gay wedding of firecrackers, brass band and wedding procession was dourly abandoned for a round-table discussion which studied and appraised the value of the new style wedding in contrast to the old!

BORN WITH IT

We are born with a sense of humor. That eminent psychologist, William McDougall, holds that man is the only animal which laughs and that the instinct of laughter is the only one peculiar to the human species. Ruth Washburn therefore properly found through experiments in Yale University that humor flourishes more luxuriantly in infants than in adults, a point of view supported by another student of babies, Dr. C. W. Kimmins. This sense of humor is illustrated in their bumps, falls, frights, puzzles, tickles and even disappointments.

Alas that we tend to lose this precious birthright! F. H. Allport, in "Social Psychology," declares that, "Children are the greatest laughers," but he finds that in later years their "free and boisterous humor" tends to become "refined and intellectualized."

M. A. Walker in the American Journal of Psychology says that experiments have revealed the intensity of reaction to the comic to be greatest in fourth-grade children, less in the seventh grade and least in adults.

Humor gives power to transcend a situation, to look at oneself objectively. It gives a vantage point for perspective. Humor is ability to laugh at one's puffed-up dignity and pretensions and therefore contains the seeds of a healthy humility.

Humor creates a superb detachment which cushions us against the sorrows of life, thus one finds the richest laughter among the greatest sufferers—the Jews, Irish and Negro peoples. Humor enables us to meet the unfairness, unreason and catastrophes of life with poise and acceptance.

Humor keeps a man sane in a mad world. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine."

Dr. C. O. Johnson, Baptist Leader, Speaks Tomorrow

Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, president of the Baptist World Alliance, will speak at First Baptist Church on Tuesday evening next at 8.

The Baptist World Alliance, with headquarters in London, England, is a fellowship of Baptist churches, with a membership of 17,372,000. The last census from Russia (1943) gave the Baptist membership there as 5,000,000. According to Professor Fedorov, formerly instructor in history at the University of Petrograd, the Baptist churches were the spiritual hope of that land.

Since the end of the last war, the Baptist people of North America have sent many millions of dollars worth of food and clothing to the distressed areas of the world.

Dr. Johnson is pastor of Third Baptist Church in St. Louis, Mo., with over 6,000 members.

Five Admirals At Royal Roads Graduation Ceremonies See Traditional Horseplay By 63 Graduates

One of few occasions when "top brass" of the Royal Canadian Navy have been pictured together took place Friday when five admirals attended graduation ceremonies at Royal Roads Canadian Services College. Left to right are: Rear-Admiral Victor G. Brodeur (retired); Vice-Admiral Harold T. W. Grant, chief of naval staff; Rear-Admiral E. Rollo Mainguy, Flag Officer Atlantic Coast; Admiral Percy Nelles, Canada's first full admiral, now retired, and Rear-Admiral H. G. DeWolf, Flag Officer Pacific Coast.

Cadets who graduated from Royal Roads Friday have been literally "put through the mill" for past two years by physical training instructors who make sure their charges get best of conditioning early in their service careers. After formal graduation ceremonies and P.-T. display, graduate cadets ganged up on a hapless instructor and got measure of good-natured "revenge." Result is shown in this picture. Sixty-three cadets graduated in a colorful ceremony held under clear blue sky. They attended closing ball Friday night.

Oxygen For Baby

VANCOUVER (CP)—A tiny premature baby was in "good" condition here today after a mercy flight from Oliver.

An R.C.A.F. plane was diverted from a search for a missing plane down in the interior of British Columbia to make the 160-mile flight to Vancouver.

The little girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Byers of Oliver.

Rough weather forced the aircraft, which arrived here at 7 p.m. to fly at 10,000 feet and necessitated oxygen being given the baby.

SUNDAY LESSON

Prophet Amos Like Farmer In New York

Sunday Lesson—Farmer Coming—118-3

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

If we could imagine some healthy, clear-eyed, intelligent farmer coming into a modern Gotham, we should have a fairly accurate picture of the prophet Amos, the herdsman farmer, going into the big city, in the long, long ago.

This modern farmer might have to be one of the last generation, before farming itself became something of big business, and the farmer himself became involved in the problems and conditions that affect the country as a whole.

That farmer, coming from his simple life and tasks, might not be fair in all his judgments. He might know from experience how true it is that all wealth comes from work and the soil, but he might not realize how much that is fine and worthy in the complex life and culture of modern society is based upon the accumulation of generations of work and productivity. His vision, if clear and uncorrupted, might also be somewhat narrow.

CLARITY OF VISION

But with great clarity of vision, and with a keen sense of life's elemental honesties, he would see many things as Amos saw them in that long ago. He would see on many hands the struggle for wealth and power, with too often a disregard of either honesty, or the rights and welfare of others, in that tense pursuit.

He would see signs of efficiency in the building and management of the city, but he would soon be aware of the corruption and graft that too often went on beneath the surface.

He would observe the widespread craze for gambling, and the passion to get something for nothing, and the less obvious forms of ease, luxury and self-indulgence, in which many lived as actual parasites, giving nothing to society in return for all that they enjoyed.

He would see, also, grosser forms of evil, the dissipation, the licentiousness, the disregard of wholesome relationships between men and women, the breakdown of family life, the poverty in contrast with great wealth, and the neglect of little children in slum areas, with the resulting juvenile delinquency.

MUCH TO SHOCK

All this he would see, and a great deal more that would shock him, even in a society in which there is much that is more occasion for worthiness and pride; for it is to be hoped that the farmer-prophet would not be a complete pessimist.

But he would not be a prophet if he did not see the evil, and deal with it. A prophet is a social physician; and what would one think of a doctor, who ignored a diseased part of the body to dwell upon how well the rest of the body might be?

What did Amos, and his fellow prophet Hosea, have to say about the evils that they saw? My next article will explore their message.

Biologists From U.S., B.C. Hold Meeting In City

Preparation of bird and mammal specimens for museums was demonstrated when members of the Pacific Northwest Bird and Mammal Society convened at the Provincial Museum today with representatives from Oregon, Washington and various parts of British Columbia.

Victoria members of the Natural History Society will join the visitors at an evening session commencing at 8.

Business of the society is being conducted, and technical papers presented at an afternoon session.

Dr. Murray Johnson of Tacoma, Washington, president of the organization, is chairman. Dr. I. McTaggart Cowan of the University of British Columbia, vice-president for B.C., also is in attendance.

A tour to neighboring bird areas is being arranged for Sunday.

Confesses Because Mind Disturbed

NEW YORK (AP)—A New York lawyer is accused of stealing more than $250,000 and gambling all but 50 cents of it away. A 33-count indictment charging grand larceny and forgery Friday named the lawyer as Arthur Nash, 44, sole surviving member of a 75-year-old law firm. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Nash had given himself up because "his conscience was driving him mad."

To Vote On Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—After a week of sporadic debate, the Senate agreed Friday to start voting next Friday on the $3,372,450,000 foreign aid bill.

Prolongs Stay

VALLETTA, Malta (Reuter)—Princess Elizabeth has postponed her departure from Malta "for a few days."

First Baptist Adds 51 Members To Congregation

Fifty-one new members were added to the congregation of First Baptist Church during the past year, it was reported at the annual meeting.

The sum of $11,275 was raised for current expenditure, repairs and improvements to the church. In addition, $2,910 was put up for mission work and $850 for the minister's superannuation fund, temperance, Lord's Day Alliance, Bible Society and Food for Britain funds.

The church authorized the paying of the pastor's expenses as a delegate to the World Congress of Baptist Churches, to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, the last week of July.

Mrs. C. W. Bradshaw and Mrs. George Bishop were presented with life memberships in the provincial Baptist Women's Missionary Society.

Rev. G. R. Easter, pastor, supported the choir radio broadcasts each month. The religious education department under Miss Ina Elliot also was praised for work accomplished during the past year.

CONFLICT
By W. A. Plenderleith
This thrilling novel by a brilliant Canadian is already proving immensely popular. It begins in 1775, when the American Colonies first plotted to overthrow British control in North America. The chief action takes place aboard the ship Mercury in the West Indies and later between the Loyalists and rebels in Johnstown, New York, and on the courageous flight of the Loyalists to Canada.

TOTAL WORKING WEEK	43.8 hours

The overtime has been computed at time-and-a-half. However, quite a percentage of overtime was paid at double time, so reducing the total hours of the working week as shown above.

The Union which called THIS STRIKE has an agreement with at least one other Company in Victoria on a straight week of 47 hours at a lower pay rate. NOT ONE of our categories, including total overtime, equals a 47-hour week.

WHAT MORE CAN WE DO?

We have offered to sign an agreement with our men giving them rates of pay higher than any being paid in our industry in British Columbia.

FLEMING-MERRIMAN TO DEFEND BUTTONS SUNDAY

Play in the city senior golf button matches will resume again tomorrow after a long lay-off with the present holders, Johnny Merriman and Bob Fleming of Gorge Vale, meeting Dr. George Bigelow and J. N. Bell of Victoria Club.

The match will be played at the Gorge and will start at 2.

Starting with Sunday's match, the button will be competed for in Scotch foursome play. In other words, players will hit alternate shots and also alternate off the tee.

It will be the 11th defence of the buttons for Fleming and Merriman.

Nagy's Homer Defeats Yanks

"Here's to Joe Page" remains Bucky Harris' favorite toast. Now the Washington manager celebrates Joe's home run ball, not his relief pitching.

Revenge must be sweet for the former New York Yankee pilot who was fired after just missing the 1948 pennant. For the second time in six days, his maligned Senators whipped Fireman Joe.

Steve Nagy, drafted from the Pacific Coast League for $10,000, turned back the world champions for the second time last night, 5 to 4. On top of that, he won the game with an inside-the-park homer off Page in the eighth inning.

Harris saw Steve win 15 for San Francisco last year when he was managing San Diego. On his advice, owner Clark Griffith drafted the 29-year-old southpaw.

Washington pulled an unusual triple play in the third inning. With Fred Sanford on third and Phil Rizzuto on first, Jerry Coleman lined to Ed Stewart who made a sensational catch in right field. Stewart threw the ball to Eddie Robinson, catching Rizzuto off first. Robinson's peg to the plate tripled Sanford trying to score.

SECOND FOR FELLER

Bobby Feller, cut in salary and demoted to No. 2 boy on the Cleveland staff, picked up win No. 2 yesterday, cutting down the on-rushing Detroit Tigers with eight hits, 6 to 1.

Boston welcomed their "Fenway Park cousins"—the Philadelphia A's—with a 4 to 1 victory behind Mel Parnell. Not since Sept. 12, 1948, have the A's won a game at Boston.

The Chicago-St. Louis game in the American was rained out after two and a half scoreless innings.

Cincinnati finally got in the win column by whipping Chicago 3 to 1. It took Herm Wehmeier's two-hit patching to silence Frankie Frisch's upstart Cubs who had swept their first three starts.

Ralph Kiner took matters into his own hands in the seventh inning with a two-run homer that gave Pittsburgh a 4 to 3 edge over St. Louis Cards.

Curt Simmons and Philadelphia Phillies downed Boston 6 to 1 in a night game. Simmons gave only three hits and chipped in with two singles in the 14-hit attack that routed Johnny Sain.

Rookie Dan Bankhead rescued Don Newcombe in Brooklyn's 5 to 3 victory over New York Giants before 39,090 night customers at the Polo Grounds. The game was decided in the third when Brooklyn chased loser Jack Kramer with a four-run blast.

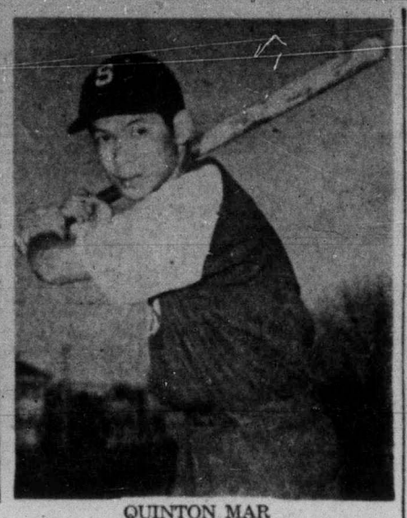
RAY HOUGH



QUINTON MAR

In Softball Openers Sunday

Four teams of the five-team senior A men's softball league will see action at Central Park Sunday as the league swings into its 1950 schedule. The defending champion Douglas Tire nine will face B.C. Forest Products following the opening ceremonies at 1.30. Chinese Students will meet Brentwood Aces in the second half of the twin bill at 4. Ray Hough is a likely starter for the Forest Products nine, while 16-year-old Quinton Mar is one of Students' star outfielders.

Soccer Officials Complete Plans For Appearance Of English Side

"Wizard of Dribble," Stanley Matthews is one of the 17 English stars who will visit Victoria as members of the Football Association touring team that is to play here June 1.

Match will be played at Athletic Park with a kick-off time of 6.30. The Englishmen will meet a representative island team chosen from Victoria United and the Victoria and District League clubs.

The arrangements for the match were made yesterday at a meeting attended by Blackie Bengert, president, and John Richardson, secretary, of the B.C.F.A.

Pat Mulcahy, local soccer commissioner, will be chairman of the main committee making the match arrangements. Other members are Sam Smith, secretary Island Soccer Commission; Charles Lewis, chairman Victoria and District League, and Harry Young, island director Pacific Coast League.

Arrangements have been made to have the whole of the seating accommodation at Athletic Park numbered and reserved. The price of the tickets, of which there will be over 5,000 is $2.

There will also be room for about 1,000 spectators behind the east goal, and they will be admitted at $1. Children will be admitted to this area for 50 cents.

TO NAME MANAGER

The Victoria team manager and coach will be appointed this week-end.

Their game at Victoria will be the fifth of the tour for the English team. They are due to arrive at Quebec on the Empress of Scotland on May 17, and will play their first match at Montreal on May 20. They then play at Toronto, Saskatoon and Vancouver before crossing to Victoria on May 31. They will arrive on the afternoon boat and will make the Empress Hotel their headquarters. They will leave for Vancouver the morning after the match.

Although the English team is not the strongest possible, owing to the fact that the International XI is taking part in the World Cup series at Rio de Janiero, the 17 players chosen are all top-rate performers and might be termed a very good second string to the World Cup team.

OUTSTANDING WINGER

In Stanley Matthews, whom it is hoped will play in Victoria, is the outstanding wing forward of the generation. In his dribbling power and general craft he is probably unparalleled in the history of the game.

All-Star Ball Club To Work Out Sunday

Anyone wishing to try out for the Victoria All-Star senior baseball club is invited to a workout at Beacon Hill Park Sunday morning at 10. Practice will be held in preparation for an exhibition game in Duncan May 6. Bill Prior has been named temporary manager.

Monday is the final date for entries in the 1950 senior ball league. Two entries are contemplated, and others wishing to play are urged to make written application to the secretary. A third team will be carried and a practice will be held in conjunction with Sunday's All-Star workout.

WEST HEAT SOFTBALL

West Heat senior B softball team will practice at Bullen Park, Esquimalt, at 10 Sunday morning.

Over 300 Enter British Golf Contest

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP)—A record entry of 322, including 32 from the United States, has been received for the British amateur golf tournament which will be played here starting May 22.

The Americans include three former holders of the title—Stranahan of Toledo, O.; Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N.Y., and Robert Sweeny of New York.

Most folks know him as Bing."

Max McCready of Ireland, the defending champion, was one of the last players to enter before the deadline.

Coast League Pitchers Get Rough Going

Pacific Coast League pitchers had a hectic outing Friday night as they marched on and off the field in solemn procession.

This was especially true at Oakland where the Acorns used five twirlers in a futile effort to halt the booming bats of the San Francisco Seals.

In winning by 8 to 3 the Seals made Ernie Groth their first victim in a monstrous second inning.

At Los Angeles, Jack Salveson came on in a relief role for Hollywood in the 10th inning with the score tied at 6-all and with two men aboard. Salveson, too, threw just one ball.

Hollywood's defeat, combined with San Diego's fourth straight triumph over Seattle, lofted the Padres to within half a game of the lead. Max West and Dee Moore provided the necessary implements for San Diego's 6 to 4 conquest.

Athletics Waste Wilkie's Effort

Drop Second One-Run Decision; Vanni Hurt

By PETE SALLAWAY

There's an old baseball saying: "You gotta score runs to win." No truer words were ever spoken as Victoria Athletics tossed away a masterful mound performance by southpaw Aldon Wilkie in dropping a 1 to 0 decision to Wenatchee Chiefs in their W.I.L. tilt last night at Athletic Park before 1,300. It was the second successive one-run defeat for the A's in as many nights.

Clubs wind up their series with two games today, following which the Athletics go back on the road for engagements at Salem and Tacoma next week.

For eight innings Wilkie treated the fans to an exhibition worthy of midseason form allowing a lone Wenatchee runner to reach third base. Then in the ninth the Chiefs broke through for the only run and it was Hank Sciarra, a Tacoma and Salem cast-off who did the damage.

Buddy Hjelmaa opened the ninth for Wenatchee by hitting a ground single to right field. He was sacrificed along to second by Daniels. Wilkie forced Beckman to ground out to Smith at third but Sciarra hit the first pitch for a double down the left field line, scoring Hjelmaa.

FAIL IN NINTH

Athletics had a chance to pull it out in the ninth but once again showed their weakness at the plate. Billy Dunn, first man up, got a base on balls. Al Smith in a poor attempt to bunt popped up for an easy out. Pinch-hitter Bob Jensen went down swinging. Bob Haddock was passed putting the tying run on second base but Marty Krug, who has looked terrible against southpaw pitching, hit an infield roller forcing Haddock at second for the third out.

In addition to losing the game the Athletics may be without the services of outfielder Edo Vanni for a few games. The hustling Vanni was struck on the back of the head by a thrown ball from first baseman Sciarra while attempting to steal second in the seventh inning. He reached the base only to collapse and was taken to the hospital for X-rays.

While Wilkie was setting Wenatchee down for eight innings, lefty Don Ferrarese was doing likewise to the Athletics. However, the Victoria club had many more chances to get a run across, leaving 13 runners stranded, as compared to seven for Wenatchee. Wilkie also turned in a smart fielding performance with six assists to his credit. The Athletics cannot expect to get any better pitching and should have won. Wilkie only gave up one walk while Ferrarese issued seven passes.

In both the first and fifth innings the Athletics loaded the bags with two away and failed to get a run across. In the first instance Jim Wert grounded into a force at third while the second time Krug was out at the plate attempting to steal home.

VANNI TO PLAY TODAY

Edo Vanni, Athletics' left fielder who was injured in last night's game against Wenatchee Chiefs, will be back in his usual position for today's split twin bill with the Chiefs at Athletic Park.

Vanni was hit on the head by a ball thrown by first baseman Hank Sciarra when running between first and second base in the seventh inning. He was taken to the Jubilee Hospital for X-rays but was later released.

SEATTLE FAILS IN ATTEMPTS TO BOLSTER

Two Deals Fall Through; Tran Back With Club

SEATTLE (AP)—The woebegone Seattle Rainiers, who just can't win for losing, had reason today to feel like the swimmer who has a couple of life preservers snatched out of his grasp as he is going down for the third time.

General manager Earl Sheely said in a long distance telephone conversation from San Diego that two deals to bolster the creaking Rainiers had fallen through.

Dave (Boo) Ferriss, who was to have come to Seattle from the Boston Red Sox as part of the Sammy White sale a year ago, refused to report and was assigned to Birmingham of the Southern Association. Ferriss, a right-handed pitcher, had several big years with the Bosox.

Sheely also had Johnny Ostrowski, former Los Angeles third baseman virtually signed, sealed and delivered when, instead, the Chicago White Sox used him as trading material to get Dick Wakefield from the New York Yankees.

Meanwhile, Jim Keating, who was shipped back from Dallas of the Texas League, has been sent to Vancouver of the Western International League, and Len Tran, stocky second baseman, has been returned by Scranton of the Eastern League and probably will be reassigned to a W.I.L. club.

In a desperate search for a shortstop, Sheely is toying with the idea of calling in Ray Tran from Vancouver. He said he had even considered bringing up young Charlie Davis from Spokane of the W.I.L.

DUNCAN OPENS NEW GUN CLUB

Local Shots Will Participate; Good Fishing At Shawnigan Lake

By ROY THORSEN

Victoria clay-pigeon marksmen will journey to Duncan next week-end to participate in the grand opening of the new Duncan Elks Gun Club. It will be held May 7.

Tom Garner has sent an invitation to Roger Monteith inviting all to attend the opening. Grounds are located six miles from Duncan on the Cowichan Lake Road. Prizes will be given for the longest run of the day in A, B and C trapshots.

Action on the shooting scene this week-end will be at the Albert Head Road grounds of the Victoria Gun Club starting tomorrow afternoon at 1.

The annual B.C. fish and game convention is in progress at the University of British Columbia campus. Many important decisions in regard to fish and game will be decided at the three-day parley.

A siege of warmer weather will do a lot to pick up trout fishing activity.

SHAWNIGAN GOOD

Shawnigan Lake gets the highest recommendations for its offerings at the present time. The trout on the west side are taking orange flatfish and spinner and worm.

Big and Little Thetis Lakes offered good fishing last week-end and are worth a try.

Cusheon Lake on Salt Spring Island gets a good rating for fishing with fly and on the troll.

Grant, Matheson, Wolf, Kamp, Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes only get a fair rating from the game wardens.

Art Hancock telephoned the information Friday that fishing is coming on again in the upper reaches of the Cowichan River.

Results were not good from Dougan Lake (Cobble Hill) last week-end.

Fishing is reported fair throughout the Nanaimo country and is still good in lake and stream in the area stretching from Courtenay through to Sayward.

On the salmon fishing front, anglers report a lot of bluebacks, some springs in Saanich Inlet. Of late, however, the fish are not showing any eagerness toward anglers' offerings.

The many good catches of a few weeks ago are not in the picture these days.

NO LAW PROBLEM THIS

Jack Ruttan was one of the anglers at Goldstream last Sunday who saw lots of fish in evidence but unwilling customers. However, he did get one. He had it in the net, in fact, but the fish suddenly did a flip and soared to freedom. "Shouldn't happen to a dog," said Jack.

Al Entwistle figures that Johnny Field, who just became the proud owner of an 18-foot speed craft (toned down for fishing) will be entering the Olympia-Victoria predicted log race to oppose Joker Patton's Aileen this year.

Red Wells, Times composing room, will soon be out on the waters off Oak Bay showing off his latest baby. It's a smart-looking craft that has been in the making in his basement for some months.

FROM THE FANSTAND

By PETE SALLAWAY, Times Sports Editor

When another National Hockey League season rolls around could be the game's number one circuit will be missing two of its most colorful characters—Lester Patrick, vice-president of Madison Square Garden Corporation and a name synonymous with the New York Rangers and Connie Smythe, head man of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

During the season just closed Patrick spent the winter in his home town looking after his latest hockey interests in the Pacific Coast League and his hockey association with the Gardens was strictly in an advisory capacity. It is quite possible the last link may be severed completely before another season gets under way.

Two Of Game's Great Names

Now Smythe has come out with the statement he may give up his position as head of the Leafs with Coach Happy Day as the logical man to replace him. If both Patrick and Smythe drop out of the picture the N.H.L. will lose two of its greatest personalities. Both rank high in the annals of professional hockey and their passing from the N.H.L. picture will leave a big gap from the standpoint of executive ability.

Seattle Scribe Likes A's

Victoria Athletics are a definite pennant threat in the W.I.L. this season if one rates the opinion of Royal Brougham, Seattle scribe, worth anything. Commenting on league prospects for the season Brougham writes:

"The fast and lively Western International League is off to another good start, with seven clubs cherishing a single thought—Whack the Yakima Bears. Manager Joe Orengo's team won handily last year, but gone are Edo Vanni, Ted Jennings and Dick Briskey, his three top stars. This year the issue is divided between the three independents and the five clubs with Coast League affiliations. The 'loners' are Victoria, Spokane and the Tri-City group, and like Seattle, they have no fond and loving parents of a higher classification to feed them nourishment in the form of players.

"Incidentally, Emil Sick owns Vancouver, and the Capilanos' Bob Brown is hoping that Dick Sinovic and Vern Kindsfather will come back to Canada.

"This season Victoria, off to a slow start, has been loading up to make a real bid for the pennant. The B.C. city is one of the best baseball towns in the northwest and President Johnny Johnson has invested heavily in such talented performers as Vanni, Jake Mooty, Ronnie Smith, Aldon Wilkie and Gene Thompson. The Vancouver Island city is a staid and reserved community, but if Manager Marty Krug can get his team rolling to its first pennant, the dignified citizenry will paint the town red."

Californians Like Cricket

California has sent out a call for cricket players. Yes, the game that Englishmen have introduced to most parts of the world, is flourishing in the sunny south. Matches are played every Sunday at Griffith Park in Los Angeles with seven teams participating.

Cricket was popularized in California by English members of the film colony in Hollywood. It will be remembered that before World War II a team of actors made an annual trip to Victoria for a series of international matches. One summer a local team made a return trip south and members of that squad will cherish for a lifetime the memories of that jaunt.

Incidentally cricket in British Columbia this year celebrates its centenary. Understand the players and officials on the mainland plan quite a celebration to mark the 100th milestone.

Mixed Trundling Champions

Yet another bowling league winner was decided during the past week when the K Shoe Store team won the championship of the Major Mixed Fivepin League at the Capital City Bowladrome. The K team, winners of the league's A section, defeated the B section champions, Poiar Bars, in a three-game rolloff to take possession of the Home Cafe Trophy. Left to right: Win Curtis, Don Parkinson, Jim Parkinson, Dot Curtis and Mavis Parkinson.

Better Halves Wind Up Year

The Better Halves Bowling League season officially came to a close at the Strathcona Hotel Tuesday when league members were guests at a banquet and prize giving.

League president Mrs. A. Pellow presented prizes to various winners. High average went to Mrs. C. Walker with 184. Mrs. M. Jealouse was runner-up with 181. High three games of 709 was registered by Mrs V. Lyall and high single of 317 by Mrs. E. Keating.

Fractures Hand

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightweight champion Ike Williams has a broken hand and his twice-postponed bout with Lester Felton in Detroit will have to be set back again, it was learned today.

The champion fractured his hand in training and has it in a cast.

Williams was scheduled to meet Felton, Detroit welter, in a non-title bout May 5. The Michigan Boxing Commission suspended Ike for failing to go through bouts with Felton on two other occasions.

Calgary Stamps Grab Copeland

TORONTO (CP)—Bob Moran, youthful president of the Toronto Argonauts football team, and manager Teddy Norris sat tight today in face of player losses that pointed up reports of widespread dissension in the team that last won the Grey Cup in 1947.

Three, possibly five, salwarts of the 1949 Argos will be with other clubs next fall.

Backfielder Royal Copeland, all-star pass receiver, tosser and runner, has signed with the Calgary Stampeders. Backfielder Doug Pyzer and lineman Don Durno will be with Edmonton Eskimos. Linemen Frank and Jake Dunlap are understood to be leaving Argos to return to Ottawa.

Moran said "We're sorry to see Copeland leave, naturally. But he's over 21 and free to do what he wishes. As for Durno, we didn't figure on him at all. Pyzer has signed a contract with us and we will expect him to live up to it. He can't play for Edmonton."

Moran said also that the resignation of John Stuart as a director of the club will be accepted. Stuart, horse owner and sportsman, revealed he had submitted his resignation some time ago and said he was definitely through with the Argos. Stuart said he had offered to buy the club for $250,000 but his bid had been rejected. His resignation was placed in writing after he had made various contacts for new Argo officials and players which were rejected.

Moran intimated bitterness would crop up at the east-west final next fall, when it came to east-west financial arrangements. The west, he said, were "always screaming about expenses and claiming they can't compete with the east. Yet Annis Stukus offered Copeland $6,500 to go to Edmonton, so Calgary must have offered him more. Nobody on Argos gets nearly that much."

Copeland now is in Calgary and said by telephone to Toronto last night that he "hasn't any beefs against Argonauts." Manager Tedder Norris merely commented that "I hope he's done what's best for Copeland. Copey was the greatest that ever played in my time."

Amateur Hockey Clubs Ready For Tough Tilts

MONTREAL (CP)—Two well-rested junior hockey squads meet tonight for their second clash in the Memorial Cup final series. And it will probably be a bitter battle.

Regina Pats and Montreal Canadiens by-passed a practice session yesterday when the Forum was unavailable and neither team planned practices for today.

Coach Murray Armstrong said last night he was well pleased with Pats' showing in the first game Thursday night although they lost 8 to 7. Now that the visiting western champions "have their bearings" on Montreal ice, Armstrong said, "it will be a different story from now on."

Sammy Pollock, Montreal coach, wasn't too impressed with his team's showing but promised they would be "considerably improved" for tonight's fixture.

Although Canadiens are given a slight edge to take the best-of-seven series and the Canadian championship, Pats still weren't counted "out" in Montreal's feverish hockey circles.

Regina's smooth passing and dead-on drives put them in a favorable position to topple the eastern champs.

Captain Morely McNeil, who led Regina's scoring with three goals, said yesterday his team "can take Canadiens."

Third game in the series will be played in Toronto Tuesday with the remainder being played back in Montreal.

SENIORS READY

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders may be underdogs in their forthcoming best-of-seven Allan Cup final with Toronto Marlboros but coach Byron (Butch) McDonald says "the boys are ready to give those eastern champs a real fight."

"Those eastern champs," a younger aggregation than the veteran-heavy cowboys, were scheduled to arrive here by train today. Coach Joe Primeau came by plane last night and went to bed early.

The series opens here Monday. Stamps took it easy yesterday but plan a full-scale workout tonight. Marlies likely will stretch their legs on the Victoria Arena ice this afternoon.

The Stampeders haven't a casualty on the club. McDonald said that "unless we run into some misfortune in our workout tonight we'll go into the series at full strength and we hope to remain that way."

NEW YORK—Paody Demarco, 135¾, Brooklyn, outpointed Denis Brady, 137¾, New York, 10.

Vote Next Week On How To Slash Federal Costs

Conservatives Move For Commission To Explore Increasing Of Efficiency

OTTAWA (CP)—The Progressive Conservative Party has placed before the Commons a proposal for establishment of a royal commission to show the government how to cut costs.

The suggestion, stirring a vigorous debate, came from George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, as he capped a 90-minute speech Friday by moving that a commission be set up with power to make recommendation to:

1. Reduce public expenditure to the lowest point consistent with efficiency.

2. Eliminate duplication of overlapping services.

3. Improve the general efficiency of government and assure the civil service of full recognition of its responsibilities.

4. Consolidate all public services and departmental activities of a similar nature.

The motion will come to a vote next week.

The debate drew comment from Prime Minister St. Laurent, Finance Minister Abbott, Solon Low, Social Credit leader John Diefenbaker (P.C.-Lake Centre); J. M. Macdonnell (P.C.-Toronto-Greenwood); Jean Francois Pouliot (L-Temiscouata); Rodney Adamson (P.C.-York West); L. P. Picard (L-Bellechasse); Ross Thatcher (C.C.F-Moose Jaw) and Angus MacInnis C.C.F-Vancouver East).

In the early stages, Mr. St. Laurent said the government will investigate the flood situation in Manitoba to decide whether federal aid will be given.

He also disclosed that advantages and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship will be emphasized in Canadian schools May 23, the date on which schools ordinarily mark Empire Day.

During the private members' hour, Trade Minister Howe promised to consider measures to give farmers in the Churchill, Man., area the benefit of the cheaper fright rate on wheat shipped through that Hudson Bay port.

He made that statement in opposing a bill sponsored by Percy Wright (C.C.F-Melfort) which would have made that mandatory. Mr. Wright withdrew his bill on the strength of Mr. Howe's undertaking

Ground Recovered By Stocks After Waves Of Profit-Taking Sweep Across Markets

By FRANK KAPLAN

The 10-month bull market on security exchanges was swamped by profit-taking sales early this week, but later support pulled average price levels close to the previous week's peaks.

Investors became even more selective than in recent weeks in their hunt for bargains. Some observers say the heavy profit-taking in the face of improved business news is paving the way for a resumption of the upswing that began last June.

Others believe there are still many investors waiting to take their profits and get out of the market. They maintain this week's comparatively narrow price movements are signs of preparations for a sell-off.

New York was pushed lower the first three days of the week. Activity slowed considerably on the downtrend. Generally, the selling came in short bursts that quickly sent leaders downwards until support appeared and prices levelled off at the lower levels.

Aircraft stocks spurred an advance Thursday with trading increasing. Automobiles and chemicals hooked onto the upturn Friday. The Associated Press 60-stock average closed the week at 76.1, a drop of .1 from the previous Friday.

Canadian markets reflected New York. On the whole average price changes wer slight.

In Toronto, the industrial index showed a loss of .39 from the previous Friday.

Changes in the Montreal averages were: Banks up .15, utilities off .7, industrials up .7, combined up .3, papers up 6.13, golds off 1.61.

Post For Dave Beck

SEATTLE (AP)—Dave Beck, the 54-year-old Teamsters' Union leader who never went to college, has been elected president of the University of Washington board of regents.

Limited Holiday Period Affecting U.S. Industries

With nearly all industrial workers in the United States now drawing two weeks' holiday a year, production is being seriously affected in view of the fact the larger industrial companies have to restrict their holiday periods to a few months.

As a remedy for this, Webster Harrison, who addressed a combined meeting of the Oak Bay and West Seattle Kiwanis Clubs at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, urged the staggering of holidays over 12 months.

Former chairman of the Washington State Advertising and Publicity committee, Mr. Harrison suggested the same year-round basis be applied to the northwest tourist trade business.

He advocated expanding the current three-month summer period by an additional three-month period, and so on, until finally the full 12 months could be utilized for the tourist business.

Too Many Lawyers?

It has been said that there are too many lawyers.

There are in most places not enough lawyers; particularly if the services which lawyers have to offer were used by those who need them.

There are, in fact, too few people who take advantage of the training and experience which lawyers can give and who in fact ought to have legal service and guidance. Life and business are becoming more and more complicated. Lawyers can give valuable help in planning business ventures, give protection and guidance and service in many ways.

DISTANT STAR

THE STORY: Falling in love had been far from Clemency Norton's intentions when she became nursery governess to Baba, small daughter of Jon and Syrie Amberley, who live in Algeria with Jon's brother, Piers. In spite of Syrie's warning that Piers was a "born bachelor," Clemency finds herself in love with him. Further complicating matters is the fact that Clemency learns that Jon is weak, obviously dependent on Piers' generosity, and given to drinking. Clemency tries to avoid further entanglement by avoiding Piers, but while taking Baba for a walk, Piers appears and gives Baba a ride on his horse.

INSTALLMENT 18

Clemency Norton watched Piers Amberley ride off with Baba. An unpredictable person! Who would have thought of him riding off so serenely with a four-year-old? And he was supposed not to like children. But Clemency wished he had not left her feeling quite so confused and young. She had the sudden conviction that if the mood had taken him, he would have thought no more of lifting her up and taking her for a ride on the Caid than he had done of taking Baba. Perhaps it was just as well he did not seem to think of her as quite grown up.

She told Louilie to wait downstairs and bring Baba up when her uncle returned with her.

ROSES SWEET PEAS

While she was out, Abdul, the gardener, had sent up the flowers with which he supplied the nurseries every day. Clemency liked to arrange them herself. She adored flowers, and was one of those happy people who only had to put them in a vase to have them fall as she wanted them to.

The basket full of roses and sweet peas which was today's quota stood on the long table where Baba had her lessons and on which Clemency always arranged the flowers.

She was filling a vase with scarlet and crimson blossoms when a sound behind her made her turn quickly to see Piers standing in the open doorway, watching her.

Just for a moment Clemency and Piers looked at each other across the room, and she was conscious of a new troubling intentness in his eyes.

Then Baba's delighted laugh broke the silence and she came hurtling over to clasp Clemency round the knees.

"We fwightened you Clemency. We tip-toed ever so softly. I was going to say Boo!"

"I nearly jumped right out of my skin," Clemency told her. "What a trick."

"I told Uncle Piers he wasn't to make one tiny little noise so's we could surprise you."—Baba's "r's" always went to bits when she was excited.

"I am surprised — at Uncle Piers," said Clemency with a calmness she was far from feeling. This was the first time he had been in the nursery since she had reigned there.

HE WAS TEMPTED

Piers laughed. "Not my idea. The woman tempted me."

"That's a very old story," said Clemency. "Did you have a nice ride Baba?"

"Lovely. Can I go again tomorrow?" Baba ran back to her uncle.

"Tomorrow never comes," he told her.

"Why not?"

"Because it's always today."

"And anyway," announced Clemency firmly, "you've had a lovely ride, and you are now going to have a lovely rest."

"No—" As always when she was over-excited Baba showed signs of mutiny.

"You are going to do just exactly what you are told, or there will never be any more rides," her uncle announced quietly.

At that moment Louilie appeared, rather flustered. "I did not know the Sidi had returned," she said. "I was waiting—"

As a matter of fact she had been having a small flirtation with Mustapha, Abdul's son, who was a student in Algiers and spending his holiday with his father, and had missed the return of the master of the house.

Guessing something of the sort, Clemency was annoyed—Louilie had been told distinctly to wait and bring Baba up.

"Take Miss Baba to lie down," Clemency told her. "Say thank you to Uncle Piers, darling—"

"Thank you. And please take me again tomorrow when it's today." Baba put her arms around Piers' neck as he bent to kiss her. Clemency thought! Why? he's very fond of her.

"I won't promise—but we'll see. Or perhaps we'll go for a ride in the car," he said.

And now surely he would go! But he lingered, looking at the roses. "You are fond of flowers, Miss Norton?"

"I love them," she answered.

"So do I. One of the charms of this country is that one can have a garden for so many months. And—so many of the flowers from the old country."

"Yes. I've noticed that. It's lovely."

AN INVITATION

Platitudes! She wished almost violently he would go, and wanted him almost violently to stay.

Then turning towards the door, he looked back. "By the way, would you care to come downstairs and have dinner this evening?"

Her heart felt as though it had done a somersault.

"I—" she stammered. "I'm so sorry, but it's impossible this evening. I—" But he did not wait for the explanation which she was vainly trying to find to excuse her impulsive refusal.

"I see," he said. "Another time perhaps." And went out, closing the door behind him.

Angry with herself, appalled at her panicky turning down of his suggestion, she stood looking unhappily after him. Had she been unpardonably rude? Was he offended?

And yet she had felt that she could not stand the strain of dining alone with him. She was much too afraid of giving herself away.

I am absurd! she thought angrily. There really was no excuse for bad manners.

During 1949 there were 90,000 private planes in use in the United States.

Sharp Drop Last Year In Car, Fire Insurance Losses

Motorists paid $4,819,613 more on car insurance premiums in 1949 than claims made.

Stanley Taylor, provincial superintendent of insurance, said the ratio of losses to claims in the year was 51.65 while in 1948 it was 66.03.

Premiums last year amounted to $9,967,581 and claims paid out totalled $5,113,588. In 1948 premiums were $7,743,846 and claims $5,113,588.

Losses compared to premiums for fire insurance showed a drop too.

Fire insurance premiums amounted to $11,807,718 last year and claims were $6,334,663. This is a ratio of 53.65. In the previous year premiums amounted to $9,805,159 and losses, $6,542,947, a ratio of 66.73.

During 1949 an additional $142,722,399 in life insurance was written, bringing the total at the end of the year to $1,067,336,446.

Athletes On Ascania

MONTREAL — Twelve members of Canada's Empire Games team are among 700 passengers due here Sunday in the 14,000-ton Cunard steamer Ascania, out of Liverpool on her first voyage since her reconditioning.

Canadian athletes are G. L. Portelance, J. Stuart, J. Revenda, R. Muir, M. Swartman, J. Sylvan, H. Hudson, A. Ovenden, M. Vachon, Sgt. M. Plumb, R. Milord and F. Morphet.

Defaced Cemetery

LEBANON, N.H. (AP) — A test of strength which left a trail of overturned headstones, some weighing a ton, across a Lebanon cemetery, brought William C. Shovan the maximum sentence of a year in jail. He pleaded guilty to defacing and injuring more than 100 stones. Police said Shovan had been drinking.

SHOULD THESE SEALS MEAN ANYTHING TO ME?

If you are a user of laundry or dry cleaning service, these seals are of vital concern to you. They are your only sure guarantee of expert service and professional care for your clothes and household fabrics. Here's why:

The Sanitone Dry Cleaning seal is the registered trade mark of a special, patented process that actually gets out more dirt from any fabric that can be dry cleaned. The American Institute of Laundering, The Canadian Research Institute of Launderers and Cleaners, and the National Institute of Dyers and Cleaners are national associations dedicated to better laundering and cleaning methods and to a high level of trade ethics.

Through its membership in these associations, New Method is furnished up-to-the-minute bulletins and scientific data on the latest laundering and cleaning methods.

We know well in advance of new fabrics that come on the market. We are informed of their characteristics and can apply correct methods to ensure safe laundering or cleaning.

More important, several times a year we are sent test pieces which we are required to subject to our regular laundry and cleaning process. These pieces are then returned to the government laboratories at Ottawa where they are rigidly tested for soil removal, whiteness retention, tensile strength loss, etc.

Any deviation from the high standards insisted upon by these associations is quickly brought to our attention and corrective measures taken.

You can thus readily see that, by sending your clothes to New Method, you are purchasing not only the best available service but the protection offered by up-to-date research and knowledge.

SANITONE DRY CLEANING

Evolved after years of patient research by one of the largest chemical corporations in the United States, the Sanitone process marks a revolutionary stage in the development of dry cleaning. Ordinary dry cleaning solvent removes only a portion of the soil. The Sanitone process —protected by world-wide patents and licensed only to carefully selected cleaners—removes ALL the dirt that can possibly be taken out without risk of damage to the fabric. And because ordinary cleaning methods remove natural oils which contribute to the "feel" and draping quality of new clothes, a special ingredient is added to Sanitone to restore the "like new" finish. Sanitone dry cleaning gets out MORE dirt and revitalizes your garments. Because of the high reputation of this process all over the North American continent only plants which conform to the most exacting standards of cleanliness and thoroughness are licensed to use the Sanitone process. Sanitone inspectors enforce these standards through regular inspections. Since 1935 New Method have been the exclusive users of the Sanitone process in the Victoria area.

STILL TO PLAY GANGSTER

Stormy Hollywood Figure Getting New Film Chance

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lawrence Tierney, onetime stormy figure of Hollywood night life, appears headed for another chance at a film career.

The actor, who had a knack for making headlines a couple of years back, is making a film return in "Shakedown." He says U-I has an option for a term contract after the picture "and it looks as though they will pick it up."

Tierney, who starred in "Dillinger" and a number of night club hassles, left R.K.O. two years ago. Since then he has made a picture in Portugal and done some theatre work in the east. He is portraying a gangster in the new film, but he doesn't appear concerned about being typed. "Many stars have made a mint by being typed," he said.

ROUND THE SET

Shelley Winters reports a fan objected to stories that she was dieting. "Men like to dream about pretty girls," she said. "Do you think they dream about skinny ones?"

Lucille Ball has been helping along the TB X-ray drive. When she had her chest X-rayed for a publicity photo in La Jolla, pneumonia spots were discovered on her lung. She went right across the street and stayed in a hospital for a week.

Allan Ladd is holding to his edict against beefcake (male cheesecake). Part of the plot of "Branded" concerns an identifying mark on his shoulder. He insists that only one should be bared in the film, not his whole chest.

Jimmy Stewart reports that his first postwar picture, "It's A Wonderful Life," is finally breaking even. It was made for $2,900,000 and had to return $4,200,000 before it started showing a profit. That shows you why economics have had Hollywood wacky for the last few years.

CAPSULE REVIEW

"A Ticket to Tomahawk" (T.C.S.) has a delightful time spoofing the horse opera. Everything is there — the gun-toting gal, the traveling salesman, the outlaws, the Indian attacks and the train that must get through. All of this is played with tongue in cheek and it adds up to a lot of fun. Dan Dailey and Ann Baxter star in the amiable western.

Dominion Theatre

Jeanne Crain, fresh from her dramatic triumph in Darryl F. Zanuck's "Pinky," returns to light comedy in 20th Century-Fox's Technicolor production, "Cheaper By The Dozen," currently at the Dominion Theatre.

Sinatra Quits Studio

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Crooner Frank Sinatra has been released from his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the studio and Sinatra's agent has announced. The release was asked by Sinatra, who has been under contract to the studio for about five years.

During the month of January, Ontario's 44 gold-producing mines milled 858,836 tons of ore, with a total value of $7,491,263.

Check-Off Bill Again Talked Out

OTTAWA (CP)—A perennial C.C.F. bill to make it mandatory for employers to collect union dues at the request of employees failed to gain passage in the Commons Friday night.

Labor Minister Mitchell opposed it, and he was still talking against the measure when the Friday night hour for private members' bills expired.

Farm Income Put At $1,537,387,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Net income of Canadian farmers from farming operations last year declined from the record level reached in 1948, but was still substantitily above all other years.

Preliminary estimates by the Bureau of Statistics place farm net income for the year at $1,537,387,000, about 4 per cent below the revised all-time high of $1,600,336,000 for 1948.

ANOTHER 4-STAR HIT Sponsored by THE VICTORIA Y'S MEN'S CLUB

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1950

on the TIMES

By ART STOTT

FORTY-THREE years in show business in Victoria and pioneer work with British Bioscope in the first days of silent films before that, have piled up a lot of memories for Cliff Denham, manager of the Royal Theatre. He can lean back in his office chair and reel off great names in the entertainment world as easily as a kid recites his A.B.C.s.

Cliff's favorites seem to run to the stars of earlier days. Madame Pavlova's name springs to his lips first if you ask his pick. He honors the world-famous danseuse because he thinks she had the finest ballet that ever came here. Her first appearance was before World War I in the old Victoria Theatre, which stood on the present Eaton's store site.

SHE WAS, TOO, a woman of outstanding charm and the hardest worker he has met in the theatre.

"Even when she was the best in the world, she used to keep up her practice," Denham says. "I've seen her, with a show due to start at 8.30 in the evening, down on the stage at 6 practicing for two full hours before the curtain went up."

Sir John Forbes-Robertson, whose "Light That Failed," stands out clearly in his memory, was another of Cliff's favorites. Not only was he a great artist, but a fine man in every respect.

"The first day he appeared here, he asked me between shows if I'd go for a walk with him," Cliff says. "I took him around the waterfront to Oak Bay and then on into the Uplands. I was ready to take the streetcar back to town. He decided we'd walk. The next day he came into the office to ask where we'd go for another walk. That wasn't for me. I'd done my week's walking on the first jaunt."

CYRIL MAUDE, another great British character actor, received the greatest ovation Cliff has ever seen in Victoria.

"At the close of his "Old Lavendar" the people didn't just get up and applaud. They stood on their seats, clapped shouted and whistled," he recalls.

In Maxine Elliot, Cliff found another brilliant star unspoiled by a great international reputation.

"She was one of the world's top-notch dramatic actresses, but she had the common touch, a woman of great charm and one of the easiest to get along with I have ever known," he says.

Not so easily handled were Ethel Barrymore and Marie Dressler.

"Wonderful performers, but temperamental and unpredictable. Audiences loved them, but they gave theatre managers grey hairs," he says.

DENHAM REMEMBERS the night Al Jolson stopped the show in the old Victoria. He was appearing with a road troupe.

"He came out in front of the curtain, straddled the piano in the orchestra pit and sang 10 or a dozen songs to the crowd. He just loved singing and the crowd loved him. The performance had to wait."

Jan Paderewski, playing in the old Victoria Theatre, too, showed the temperamental nature of some of the great musicians. He had to have special lighting, not too bright, almost a glow, or he wouldn't play.

"He traveled with two Steinways and his own tuner. Both pianos had to be tuned each day and both were on the stage. He'd run his fingers over the keys, choose one and give his performance."

OF RECENT stars, Denham liked Paul Robeson before the towering negro divided his stage time between art and propaganda. Though he was a magnificent singer, he had always wanted to play Othello.

"His performance was good. He was easy to handle and obliging," Cliff says.

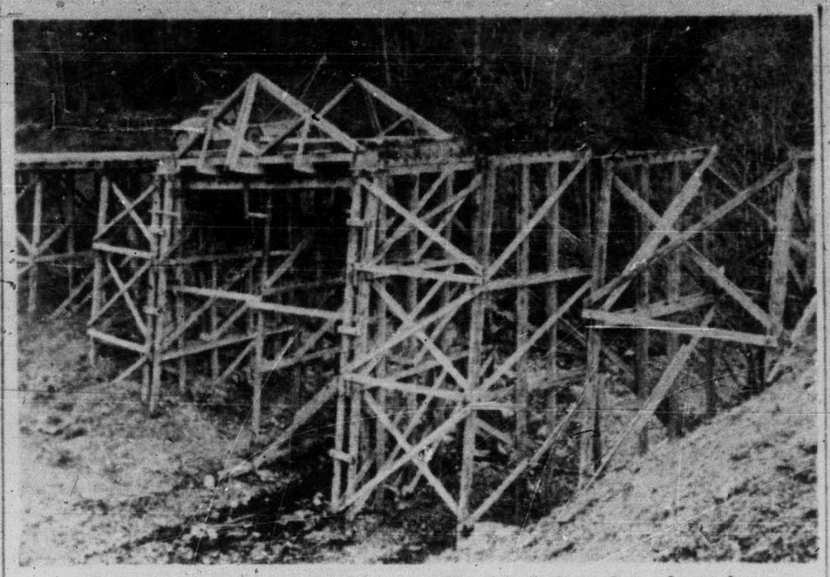
Sir John Martin-Harvey and Sir Barry Jackson stand high on Denham's list. Both brought out British repertory companies and presented several plays — something the American companies failed to do. The U.S. players usually had one show.

AS A SINGLE production, Cliff liked best the Shakespeare presented by the Stratford-on-Avon Players, the original group from Britain which converted then Lieutenant-Governor Randolph Bruce to the theatre.

"I don't think anything has come to Canada or the United States that could touch them," he says.

He has an interesting point to make on the moving picture-legitimate stage feud.

"If it hadn't been for films, theatres all over the country would have had to close up. Moving pictures kept them going and they were available when stage shows wanted to come in," he adds.



Good-Bye, Good Riddance To Malahat Landmark

College Graduates In Some Lines Must Travel To Find Employment

By GORDON E. LEIGHTON
Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—When western universities turn out graduates for special profession of which there are few local branches or openings, some difficulty may be experienced in finding employment for them.

That is the answer given here to the statement of the National Employment Service in the Victoria Daily Times that unemployment faces hundreds of graduates from the University of B.C. and Victoria College this year. There is disagreement with the generality of the Times suggestion. G. M. Morrison, chief of the executive and professional division of the service, has just returned here with a full report on the situation.

He says that of the 725 graduates of B.C. this year 327 have already been confirmed in employment. Of the 398 remaining nearly all have been referred to possibilities of employment and there is no doubt that many of these will be placed.

There is an acknowledged difficulty with a residue of mechanical, electrical and chemical engineers because there are not sufficient industries in British Columbia to absorb the output of the universities of this class of graduate. To gain jobs they must be prepared to travel. There are vacancies in the east but employers are unwilling to take on assistants until they have first interviewed them.

On the graduates' part there is in several cases an unwillingness or an inability, because of financial demands, to look abroad from their cities. In Vancouver where many of the married graduates are living, the difficulties of accommodation exercise an influence. Married men know that if they give up the accommodation they have secured they may be left without any in the event they wish to return or are unable to suit themselves in the east, or elsewhere, on their exploration of job facilities. In the case of others the cost of traveling is a difficulty they are unable easily to overcome.

The problems arise therefore not exclusively out of lack of employment but out of distance, between a prospective job and a graduate. In many cases this should not be too difficult to overcome.

Thefts From Cars

Thefts of articles from parked automobiles is continuing in the city. Bryant Jeeves, 3035 Balfour Street, Friday reported to police that a rear-view mirror was stolen from his car parked on the Gorge Road. R. Carter, 749 Jasmine, reported two hub caps stolen from his car parked outside the Memorial Arena this week.

Similar Privileges For Single Veterans Urged

Delegates to the provincial quarterly meeting of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association who gathered here today think restrictions on single men using rehabilitation credits for purchase of a small holding or household goods should be removed.

At the meeting, a resolution was passed asking the provincial command, through the Dominion command, to request the government grant the same privileges to single veterans as to married veterans.

The resolution points out that "more than half the time has elapsed (that they can use credits) since many of the single veterans were discharged, and owing to their mental and physical makeup, a great many will never marry and be able to use their credits to the full value."

ASK PENSION INCREASE

Another resolution passed by the 70-odd delegates was one asking the Dominion command to approach the government to increase the basic rate of war pension in proportion to the increased cost of living, or to add a bonus to the present rate of pension whereby it will be equivalent to the prevailing cost of living.

The West Vancouver Unit No. 274, originator of the resolution, noted that the cost of living has increased about 63 per cent in the past 10 years, but the basic rate of pensions has increased only 25 per cent.

"Several thousand first war pensioners are now unemployable and suffering hardship trying to maintain a normal way of life," the resolution stated.

Chairman of the quarterly gathering which lasted throughout the day was G. Stiles of Vancouver, provincial president.

Chief guest was A. J. Wickens, Moose Jaw, Dominion president of the ex-servicemen's organization.

STEADY INCREASE NOTED

7,345 On Provincial Government Payroll

There were 7,345 employees on the provincial government payroll at the end of last year, it was reported today by the Civil Service Commission.

This is 928 more than the number of civil servants at the end of 1948.

A steady increase in the provincial staff is noted from 1933 when there were 1,424 employees. The next year the number rose to 1,484. By 1943 the 2,000-mark was passed. By 1946 the number of civil servants stood at 4,664 and in 1947 there were 5,425. The 1948 total was 6,417.

The commission reports also sick leave granted to civil servants from Oct. 1, 1948 to Sept. 30 last, averaged four days per employee, or a total of 25,726½ days.

The branch of the government service with the largest staff is the Department of Health and Welfare. There were 2,075 employed in the department at the end of the year. Next largest was the offices of the Provincial Secretary with 1,548.

Both departments come under the Hon. George S. Pearson whose early retirement from the provincial cabinet is being rumored. Mr. Pearson has been ill since he suffered a nervous collapse during the last session of the Legislature. He was 70 last Thursday.

Third largest department is that of Public Works Minister E. C. Carson in which there were 965 employees.

Others: Premier's office, four; agriculture, 143; attorney-general, 469; education, 344; finance, 619; fisheries, six; labor, 82, lands and forests, 896; mines, 67; municipal affairs, 24; public utilities, 74; railways, seven; trade and industry, 112.

The service lost 1,255 employees last year. Sixty-two were superannuated, 1,143 resigned, 11 died and 39 were dismissed.

Of the 7,345 civil servants, 914 were under the age of 21; 1,249 were between 21 and 26; 1,074 between 26 and 31; 980 between 31 and 36; 859 between 36 and 41; 621 between 41 and 46; 549 between 46 and 51; 458 between 51 and 56; 400 between 56 and 61, and 241 between 61 and 64.

School By-Law For Qualicum Turned Down

Parksville - Qualicum School District No. 69's $350,000 by-law for a consolidated junior-senior high school has been defeated.

While more ratepayers voted in favor the by-law than against it, votes polled Friday were not sufficient to carry the by-law. Of the 1,479 residents who went to the polls, 793 voted in favor and 686 voted against. At least 887 "yes" votes, or 60 per cent of the total, was needed for approval of the loan.

The school district takes in the area between Deep Bay and Nanoose Bay.

Also included in the by-law were appropriations for repairs and additions to school buildings, $16,995; new school sites at Qualicum and Parksville, $5,000; a new two-room school at Nanoose, $26,500; furniture and equipment for schools, $33,100, and other requirements, $22,500, making a total expenditure of $454,095.

Vigorous campaigns, both for and against the by-law were waged for weeks before ratepayers voted Friday. The main opposition to the by-law came from Parksville and District Chamber of Commerce School Action Committee.

City Urged To Stop Making Overtures On Amalgamation

Ex-Alderman Says Others Faced With Increased Services Demand

Victoria has been advised to stop making amalgamation overtures to outside municipalities on the grounds the day is coming when they will appeal to the city to be taken in.

Ald. Waldo Skillings, chairman of the Inter-Municipal Unification of Services and Greater Victoria Amalgamation Research Committee, revealed in a progress report Friday his committee has been inviting persons to appear before it to outline their views on amalgamation.

C. Brackenridge, consulting engineer and former city engineer of Vancouver, gave the committee a brief preliminary survey of conditions in the four municipalities at one session and Archie Wills, former alderman, who in his 10 years on council made an exhaustive study of the subject, on invitation, presented some of the material he had gathered.

At the outset he urged the use of the term "metropolitan area" as opposed to Greater Victoria area.

WANT MORE NOW

"Cut out the overtures," he said outlining the pattern of the past quarter century. "Taxes were low in the outer municipalities in those days but today people are demanding more services, roads and the general conveniences of city service.

"This year Victoria cut its tax rate by one mill but both Saanich and Oak Bay raised their taxes. Esquimalt is going to try to hold the line at last year's 45 mills."

Mr. Wills contended the taxes in the municipalities were bound to go up with the increased demand for services.

"That increase can be applied only to the homeowner whereas in Victoria nearly half of it could be applied to the business section.

"Forty per cent of the city taxes, most of which are pre-paid are derived from the business section of the city which leaves 60 per cent of the levy on the homeowner." Mr. Wills said. "In municipalities practically 100 per cent goes on the homeowners."

He said the city should not accept the view so prevalent in municipalities that the city financial set-up is not so favorable as their own. They feel when the Victoria makes advances on amalgamation that the city is trying to overload them with debt and their taxes will go up, he said.

"Get our own house in order. Times will not be so favorable for the municipalities as they are even now. When they reach the impasse of trying to raise taxes to provide the services the municipalities will have nowhere to turn. The levy will go on the homeowner alone."

Ald. Harold M. Diggon told the committee no records on amalgamation studies over the years were kept. Ald. Skillings stated that while Mr. Wills was on city council, the first inter-municipal committee on amalgamation was formed. The latter outlined the zone plan, then mooted.

Under the zone system the majority of services in the metropolitan area would be merged. They included: Municipal staffs, schools, fire departments, police department, hospitals, libraries and parks.

"Anything relative to debts and public works would be a direct charge on any zone in which the debt was incurred or the works undertaken," Mr. Wills told the committee.

Ald. Skillings said it was planned to have the city's auditors analyze Victoria's debt structure and also its assets to get a true picture of the city. A report will be made to City Council some time in the future on the committee's work.

TRIO DODGES $22 TAXI BILL

Two men and a woman who were driven to Victoria from Nanaimo by taximan Harry McFarlane of the up-island city, quickly disappeared when they got here early today without paying the $22.50 fare. Driver McFarlane told his story to police at 2.45, reporting that when he let the trio out at the Loyal Cafe they ran away.

Increase In Employment For Women

Job opportunities for women increased this week for the first time since March, according to C. A. Mudge, manager of the National Employment office here.

Mr. Mudge said that during the week orders for temporary summer help in service canteens, local resorts, and tourist gift shops improved opportunities for female employment.

There was a considerable surplus of applicants for these positions, particularly as college students are now available for such work, he said.

He also said college students capable of typing and stenographic duties had eased the shortage of office clerical help. With less applicants for jobs and increased orders, the ratio dropped from 8 to 1 to 6 to 1.

In the male group, a considerable number were engaged on reforestation projects, he said. The number of unfilled jobs remained the same. These included factory-trained auto mechanics, and skilled sawmill jobs for up-island points.

Gets Four Months On Fraud Charges

For passing worthless cheques on two persons in the city, George Allen was given a four-month jail sentence by Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court today.

Magistrate Hall said the term would run concurrently with a three-month sentence earlier imposed in Duncan. Allen pleaded guilty to unlawfully obtaining goods worth $19.67 from Hardwareteria Ltd. and $10 from Audrey M. Hayhoe, Tip Top Cafe.

The Victoria Building Industries Exchange states: "You have been advised that the Evans, Coleman Strikers are entitled to picket your job." The Victoria Building Trades Council would like the Builders' Exchange to tell us, who advised who and when was this advice given.

Next, regarding the "Radical Political Elements":

The Building Trades Council has never at any time attempted to inject Politics into any labor dispute but would say we firmly believe there are reactionary elements inside and outside the Victoria Building Industries Exchange who will go to any lengths to destroy the Trade Union movement in this City.

The Exchange members have, whilst negotiations are in progress with Building Trades Unions, locked you out from jobs which are not in any way affected by the current strike. The Exchange, no doubt, expected this would break the strike and soften up the Unions with whom they are negotiating.

The Exchange says it will not be used to put pressure on either party. If this is the case, why the lockout on jobs not affected by the strike? If the Exchange is honest in this statement, why have they not joined with the Building Trades Council in an endeavor to get another permanent agency for cement and other building supplies, instead of making entirely unwarranted attacks on your leadership?

We would further point out that the Building Trades Council has, on two occasions, been instrumental in bringing the Parties to the Evans, Coleman dispute together in an effort to produce a settlement of the strike, but have yet to learn what efforts, if any, the Exchange has made in this direction.

We would further emphasize that the Building Trades Council have not at any time ordered men to stay off the job. We have no authority to do so.

On the other hand, the Exchange took upon itself to order its members to shut down jobs under a threat of disciplinary action if the order was not carried out.

The Roberts Baby Named For Paternal Grandfather

Of interest in this city was the ceremony in the old home of the Roberts family, 403 Young Street, when the third child of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Alexander Roberts was baptized.

The baby, gowned in robes belonging to his paternal grandfather, Thomas Douglas Roberts, for whom he was named, is the third child of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Alexander Cross Roberts, who returned to the coast recently from Hamilton, Ont., with their children.

Rev. J. L. W. McLean conducted the rites in the same room where the baby's grandfather was christened many years before, and the traditional family christening bowl of Venetian crystal was used. Mrs. Cameron Dennis Lill of Hamilton is the baby's godmother.

Following the service, a toast to the wee principal was proposed by Dr. F. M. Bryant, a family friend.

Later refreshments were served in the dining-room, where Mrs. Janie Kingsberry and Mrs. J. L. M. McLean presided at the tea table, which was covered with a "point de Venice" cloth and adorned with Holland Glory daffodils and blossoms in silver vases flanked by tall candles in antique Worcester china holders.

The christening cake, made by the baby's grandmother, Mrs. T. D. Roberts, formed an attractive centrepiece, and was cut by the infant's great aunt, Miss Jean G. Roberts, with an old Highland dagger.

Assisting in serving were Mesdames A. C. Sinclair, William Arber, A. C. Roberts and Miss Laurraine Steele.

Other guests were Rev. McLean, Mrs. W. H. Handley, Mr. Jack Kingsberry, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ainsley, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Moses, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Roberts, Mesdames Robert Armstrong, John Armstrong, J. SHOPPING GUIDE

Special Foods For Diets Found In Health Food Shop

By PENNY SAVER

"It isn't until they are on a diet that most people discover this shop," said the attractive owner of a health food shop which I visited for the first time yesterday. How true her statement is, thought I, wondering when I'd last counted up my daily calories.

This particular type of shop is a boon to persons on special diets, whether because of allergies, diabetes, asthma, or any form of ailment, who are not free to eat everything in the books.

Diabetics will find rows of specially made jams and marmalades at 85 cents a jar; tins of fruits, 25 cents; cookies at 43 cents a package; loaves of bread, 18 cents each, and even a special make of chocolate bars and chews.

Those who must contend with asthma, catarrh or arthritis will be interested to know the shop in question offers many types of herbs as well as garlic tablets and parsley tablets at $1.25 for 100 tablets.

Saltless diets prove no problem when you can pop into the store and take your choice of bread which sells for 15 cents a loaf, vegetable broth, sea salt, the vegetized variety at 50 cents a package. At the time of my visit there was quite a list of new items expected to arrive very soon.

Varieties of herbal teas, including alfamint and peppermint, were on the counter selling for 50 cents a package. Mustn't ignore the matte tea which contains no tannin, by the way, at 85 cents a pound. While on the subject of herbs, they offer a wide selection of laxative herbs, among which is the Swiss Kriss brand. Yours for 50 cents.

Looking over the rest of the shelves I spotted wheat germ packages at 15 cents, soya flour, 20 cents a package; soya beans, one pound for 25 pennies. . . . Vita Con, a vegetable puree to be used as spread, to mix with salad dressing or as a drink. The price is 95 cents a large jar. . . . Vege Sal, a type of salt which contains 10 different vegetables, is excellent for the whole family. Chuck full of vitamins and minerals, at 75 cents a carton, the salt is particularly tasty when sprinkled on foods . . . health fruit cakes that contain no white flour or sugar but rather whole wheat flour, raw sugar, cashew nuts and fruit, 70 cents . . . substitutes for meat in tins from 30 cents up; scallops, a type of shellfish, 59 cents a tin. As a matter of fact they hope it won't be too long before they have a supply of meatless wieners for kiddies! How about that? Last but certainly not least they feature a bowl filled with golden delicious apples selling for two pounds for 25 cents. I believe that shop is one of the very few to have the alkaline apple.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

We are in the midst of those days when housecleaning is going on apace and children will be conscious of the ease with which parents set fire to large piles of refuse and papers.

Children want to do everything they see done and fire has a horrible fascination for children. I'll never forget coming upon two small children standing behind a large stack of baled papers and just about to strike a match to it. Sandwiched as they were between the paper and a wall they would have been burned before they could escape. You may know that I pulled them out in nothing flat, meanwhile yelling, not whispering, for the mother.

Children can only be made to understand the danger of fire by constant explanation. The flames look so beautiful and so harmless and they want so much to enjoy the privilege of setting this power into motion.

The best way to dissipate this fascination is to allow the child the privilege of using matches under careful supervision. The mother, each time she lights a match, should explain to the child how it should be lighted and carefully and thoroughly extinguished.

Our leaflet No. 56 "Destructive Tendencies," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a happy married woman with two lovely babies, a wonderful husband and a nice home. My husband is of a very affectionate nature and very demonstrative and, thinks I don't care for him because I cannot show my love for him. Do you think if I refused to let him kiss me and pet me that he will find somebody who will? ANNIE

Answer: Absolutely. It is a pity when men and women of different temperaments marry, because it brings happiness to neither.

Most divorces are the result of husbands and wives seeking abroad the affection they were denied at home.

CHIROPRACTIC EDUCATION

By JULIUS DINTENFASS, *D.C., B.Sc., F.I.C.C.

Although yet comparatively new, the course of study presented by chiropractic colleges today compares very favorably with those in the best medical schools. The number of hours spent by the student in chiropractic colleges is equal that required of the student in leading medical schools. Every accredited chiropractic college today is presenting an academic course of four calendar years. These colleges are equipped in the most modern manner with anatomical, physiological, pathological, chemical laboratories and lecture halls. The courses of study are most comprehensive and cover the following subjects: Anatomy, physiology, pathology, chemistry (including urine analysis and toxicology, bacteriology, symptomology, gynecology, diagnosis, clinical microscopy, hygiene, public health, dietetics, chiropractic analysis, clinical adjusting and X-ray.

All-Out Effort Urged To Bring Industry Here

An appeal for an all-out effort to attract new industry to Victoria was issued by John Vickers, general sales manager of Sidney Roofing and Paper Co. Ltd., Monday.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Vickers described Canada as the world's young giant. He reported the country as a whole was growing fast but doubted if Victoria was keeping pace.

"No man and no city can stand still in the relative sense," he said.

"If we stand still while other places are going ahead, we don't stand still; we lose ground. We can't dodge or side-step progress."

Mr. Vickers envisioned Vancouver Island with a population of a million inhabitants and the metropolitan Victoria with a population of 500,000.

The speaker complained against people who criticize industry already established here. He said these people refused to recognize the value of such establishments to the community.

He estimated present industries here could economically support 90 per cent of the city's population. He thought this fact should be impressed upon critics of industry.

With respect to new industrial plants, the speaker observed modern factory buildings are designed with eye appeal to lend a pleasant appearance to their location. He said also there was no longer justification for noise or smog.

"We can have industry in Victoria that won't spoil the landscape," he said. "We we have got to go out and get it."

MARKET REVIEW

Stock Gains Not Held At Toronto

TORONTO—Prices were mixed in brisk dealings at the short session on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Opening trends pointed upwards but mild downward pressure appeared quickly and market leaders lost their advantages.

MONTREAL—Trends were irregular near the final hour on the Montreal Stock Exchange and Curb Market. Many issues traded remained unchanged from their previous close, while moves in either direction were limited to fractions.

NEW YORK—The stock market responded to a highly selective pattern of buying.

Most in demand were automobile, aircraft, radio-television and chemical shares. Gains in these groups ranged to more than a point.

Conservatives Meet In City

Quarterly meeting of the Provincial Progressive Conservative Association executive, is being held today at the Empress Hotel, with M.L.A.'s and other officers from many parts of B.C. in attendance.

Financial Minister Herbert Anscomb, co-leader with Premier Byron Johnson in the Coalition government of the province, is presiding over the meeting as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party in B.C.

It was expected the executive would call a convention within the next few months when the party's position would be the main topic of discussion.

There are some members of the party who believe they are strong enough to "go it alone" in a provincial campaign. Others favor strongly continuation of the coalition with the Liberals.

Annual Presentation Of Safety Awards Planned

To Give Lumbering Industry Recognition For Low Rate In Frequency Of Accidents

Workmen's Compensation Board, in response to numerous requests by industry, has instituted an annual presentation of awards for safety performance in the lumbering industry.

The standard on which awards will be given will be the accident frequency rate based on the exposure in man hours.

"It is felt many firms have won the right to recognition for their efforts in accident prevention and it is believed that suitable recognition will stimulate greater interest by more operators in the problem of accident prevention through offering a challenge to better the performance that has been recognized," according to a release from the board.

It is recognized fact that the larger operations have a greater percentage of men exposed to a lower than average hazard and for this reason larger operations have a lower normal frequency rate than smaller operations.

For the purpose of the safety awards the board has broken down operations into various size groups and classifications of industries and locations.

The Commonwealth Parliamentary Association was formed as the Empire Parliamentary Association at the coronation of King George V in 1911.

DRIVING SATISFACTION DEPENDS ON HOW YOUR CAR OPERATES

Anyone can drive any car, but not everyone ENJOYS driving any car. A car that has been through our Spring Check-up is a car that anyone can ENJOY driving. Among other things:

We drain out the Winter's anti-freeze. And flush the cooling system so it won't wheeze.
When the job is all done everyone agrees Driving satisfaction climbs several degrees.

DRIVE IN NOW! LET US GIVE YOU AN ESTIMATE!

Reserve Forces Training Dates, Places Announced

EDMONTON (CP) — Reserve force commanders of army units in the Western Command, who met earlier this month at Vancouver and Calgary, have approved a training plan to concentrate their units at the Wainwright military camp for an additional week following regular summer camps this year.

This was announced today by Western Command headquarters.

The new plan involves representatives of most types of reserve units. Styled along the lines of last year's concentration of the active force brigade at Wainwright, all reserve units in the two provinces will work with other arms in realistic field exercises. Reservists formerly carried out basic and corp training during their annual summer camps.

When the units arrive at Wainwright July 23 a skeleton group of all arms will be formed. The following day they will move to a concentration area about five miles from camp and, for the next four days will carry out a series of taetical problems in the 130,000-acre training area.

During this first year of concentrated field training the only corps not represented in the brigade will be that of anti-aircraft. Both heavy and light anti-aircraft reservists will take training at Esquimalt, B.C., during July.

At the recent reserve force conferences dates were announced for all summer camps in Western Command. Corps and basic training, for all branches with the exception of engineers and anti-aircraft, will take place at Wainwright July 9-22. This camp will include practical training for C.O.T.C. and officer promotional qualifications.

Royal Canadian Engineer units will train at the Royal School of Military Engineering at Chilliwack, B.C. July 9-22. Light anti-aircraft gunners are to train at the Royal Canadian School of Artillery on the same dates, while heavy anti-aircraft regiments will be in the Esquimalt camp July 23-Aug. 5.

Summer camp for youths of the Royal Canadian Army Cadets will take place during three camps in this command. About 1,200 cadets are to train at Vernon, B.C., July 5-14 during the general camp. Special trades training for about 450 cadets will follow at Vernon July 17-Aug. 26. As in past years, selected master cadets from all parts of Canada will be at Banff July 31-Aug. 21.

Chrysanthemums For Oak Bay Gardeners

Fifteen dozen chrysanthemum slips were given away to members of the Oak Bay Amateur Chrysanthemum Society at its regular meeting Friday night.

Thirty-five members attended and were advised that next week a number of varieties from the east would be available for distribution. Most of the slips handed out last night were from local growers whose plants escaped damage from the hard winter.

Best blooms from these slips will likely appear in shows to be held later this year.

New Optical Firm Has First Anniversary

Maycock Optical completes one year of service to the public of Victoria on Tuesday, May 2 of this year. The head of the firm, Ronald W. Maycock, is well-known in Victoria for he has been active in the optical profession here in Victoria for 19 years.

It was back in 1931 when Mr. Maycock had his first taste of optical work. At that time he was employed by the Consolidated Optical Co. as a delivery boy, starting salary was $6.00 per week. Mr. Maycock recalls his first duties upon arriving for work that morning 19 years ago, when he was handed the broom to sweep the office floor. Realizing the opportunity ahead of him in being apprenticed in the optical field, it was no time at all that first morning when the office floor was swept in record time. However, after finishing his first duties, Mr. Maycock recalls very well of being told by his supervisor at that time that the floor would have to be swept again, as he had failed to move the chairs and sample cases which were on the floor. By sweeping around them he was told that he had not done a thorough job, and if he could not sweep the floor right, he would never learn to do his optical duties right; his supervisor at that time said if a job is worth doing, please do it right.

After serving with the firm three years as delivery boy, Mr. Maycock was given the opportunity of working in the optical laboratory as the foreman's assistant, with an increase in salary from $6 per week to $12.75. After many years' training, Mr. Maycock was appointed the optical laboratory foreman, with a staff of three assistants.

It was not until 1946 that Mr. Maycock was finally promoted Victoria branch manager of the Consolidated Optical, a goal that he had in mind back in 1931 when he first started in the optical profession. As manager, Mr. Maycock had a staff of seven employees under him; this position he held for three years before resigning to go into business for himself.

As Mr. Maycock takes time out to look back over the years, he feels that owing to his years of experience and real training, he is now able to bring his knowledge of optics to the public in general, guaranteeing satisfaction to all.

Therefore, not only is Mr. Maycock proud of his ever-growing business and also celebrating the completion of his first year in business for himself, he is also proud that his office today at Room 101, 1216 Broad Street, is the same office that the Consolidated Optical Co. occupied when he first started in 1931.

Mr. Maycock today is considered a specialist in filling optical prescriptions, and the fitting of spectacles, and has been rated as the best in British Columbia. Just recently Mr. Maycock has purchased the optical prescription records formerly held by the Hale Optical, who have moved their firm to Vancouver. Therefore, Mr. Maycock is pleased to announce that all patients formerly of the Hale Optical Co. here in Victoria will be assured of expert attention on any further optical service required by them whose prescription records we have on file at our office. ***

Find Figures

BY ANALYSIS, you can find the digits represented by letters in this problem in division. The same letter represents the same digit throughout it.

When solved, the digits 0 to 9 will spell the name of a famous character in novels of James Fenimore Cooper.

```
          I F N D
      ---------------
A T D) N E H E N F
       N T I
       -----
         I E F
         I P P
         -----
           E F N
           D I P
           -----
             R N F
             E D I
             -----
```

In the subtractions 0 can be located easily. It also may be deduced from the subtraction problems that E is 1 greater than D and that R is 1 greater than E. The first digit in the quotient must be 1, 5 or 6, as they are the only numbers that, when multiplied by themselves, will give a number that ends with the same number. It will be apparent from the following multiplications that 1 must be discarded.

Solution: Six eight three four six seven divided by one two five seven four six seven and a remainder of seven one two. The digits spell the word "Tashtunder."

Answer: The nearest railing would be on your right.

Brain Tester

Answer: The odds are even, as on every toss, if you aren't using a lucky coin.

THE DARING ESCAPE

A PRISONER was in a dungeon sixty feet above ground. Friends managed to smuggle him a rope, but when he first attempted to use it, he found it was only 30 feet long. So he divided it in half, tied the two ends together, and let himself down the full 60 feet by the rope. How was that possible?

Solution: He unravelled it and so divided it into two halves, which he tied together to have a sixty-foot rope.

YOU Be The Detective

JETHROE Q. JONES, besides numerous business interests, pursued a pet avocation—he was a fire buff. In case you don't know, a fire buff is an amateur fireman who follows (or beats) the fire engines to all fires.

The evening of March 15 Jones had a "must" engagement to preside at a freely publicized affair at the country club. His wife, Cordelia, a leading socialite in the town, couldn't be there because she had to be at a charity bazaar being held for one of her favored benefactions. Since the affair was not for a display of jewels she thought it just as well that the baubles be be kept locked in the wall safe at home. For there had been many recent jewel thefts.

Mrs. Jones went off to her engagement early while Jones dallied a bit longer than he should have looking over papers relating to a pending realty deal. He was putting these away when the library telephone rang.

An unfamiliar male voice asked, "Are You Mr. Jones,"

"Yes. Who's calling?"

"Doesn't matter. But you'd better hurry down to Long Point. A boathouse is burning and they say it's yours—"

Jones was mute with surprise, and hadn't said another word when he heard a click. The call was broken off. He reflected a moment, then got on his hat and coat, stepped out to his station wagon and sped off in it.

At a nearby service station he pulled up, made a hurried phone call, then waited, smoking nervously, while his gas tank was being filled. Presently a police car came up, Jones hailed its occupants, got his car moving, and led the patrol car back to his house.

In a matter of minutes two "heist" artists were surprised and taken, handcuffed to each other to the town lockup in tow of the policemen. One had been caught springing open the Jones' family safe. The other was seized as a lookout. They were the pair police had been after for various other jewel thefts. Their use of a "phony" fire alarm ruse to get Jones out of the house had led immediately to their capture. Why?

Solution: The telephoned alarm of fire was the crooks' mistake. They had spotted Mr. Jones' Ford at a night club. They had read every issue of the local paper carefully, watched the house closely, learned the territorial activity and had every thing else worked out precisely. But they didn't know that Jones, as a volunteer fire buff, had a siren installed in his home identical to that in the town firehouse. Hence that night's sounded any alarm. He knew that the telephoned fire call was a "phony."

Mind Tester

As a test of your powers of deduction and analysis, try getting the answer to this poser:

If ½ of 5 were 3, what would ⅓ of 10 be?

Solution: It would be four. Proceed with this equation: ½ : 5 = 10 : x. The factor that causes ½ × 5 to give three according to the poser must be introduced into the product 1/3 × 10. This is expressed by: 3.

Deadly Spider May Lurk In Your Back Yard

By HUMPHRY DAVY

THE BLACK WIDOW spider has been attracting a good deal of attention in Victoria ever since nine-year-old David Hill, 1943 Mayfair Drive, was bitten by one recently. The boy spent a day in hospital and for a while was very sick from the spider's toxic poison.

The same spiders are probably spinning their webs in your garden. But there is no need to be alarmed as they have probably been there for years. In spite of their relative large numbers on the island, the boy is the only one on record as having been bitten by one in the area.

The existence of the spiders on Vancouver Island, common in other parts of the province and in the United States, was first brought to light in 1934 by Dr. Harry Andison, Dominion entomologist and Dr. W. Downes, now retired from the Dominion Department of Agriculture. They probably existed on the island long before their discovery but were not noticed until then.

Their discovery at the time caused a sensation and was widely publicized in British Columbia. The spiders were placed on exhibition in Vancouver and attracted larger crowds than the zoo at Stanley Park. Thousands peered at a bottle containing specimens.

Contrary to popular belief, the black widow spider is not vicious nor aggressive and does not voluntarily attack people. There is also no foundation in the belief that the spider will spring from its web and attack a passer-by. It will, however, bite quite readily any person, touching its web when egg-sacs are present.

The poison it carries can prove fatal, especially on people suffering from weak hearts. Drop for drop, the poison is as deadly as the venom of a rattlesnake.

Nature endowed this peculiar spider with fangs and poison glands similar to the rattlesnake. When the spider bites, the poison runs from a small gland into a hollow tooth which is injected into the victim.

The spiders live and construct their webs in many different kinds of shelters. Their favorite haunts are under and among stones. Many of them are also attracted by stumps hollowed by decay.

The web consists of an irregular criss-cross network of strands. They are remarkably strong as compared with the silk of most spiders. The criss-cross arrangements, without any definite plan, and the strength of the threads make it easy to distinguish the black widow's web.

The name "black widow" was given this spider because of its color and because the female kills and eats the male after mating has occurred. The female is about one-half inch longer. The male is much smaller and is also less dangerous.

The spider is not only a devoted mother, but also a skilled artisan. First, she spins an inverted cup of loose silk. Then she hangs beneath it and lays her eggs upward into the sac in a sticky cluster. She lays about 2,000 separate eggs and until th.. are hatched and have broken out of the sac, she stands guard over the potential poisoners.

The young spiderlings can fly, so to speak. As soon as they leave their nest, they proceed to spin some silk and at the same time let themselves go in the breeze. They float like a kite, the silk functioning like the tail of a kite.

Another peculiarity about the spiders is that they shed their skins.

It would be impossible to control the spiders if it were not for the fact that they are cannibalistic. They will eat each other up when hungry. This and their natural enemies help keep their numbers down.

The spiders can travel at a remarkable speed. Just irritate one of them with a stick as an experiment. Before you have time to drop the stick the spider will be running up your arm. It feeds on insects. The victim when caught in the web, is first wrapped up in liquid silk which the black widow pours out in great abundance as she turns the victim over and over by means of her legs.

If you are ever bitten by a black widow get to bed immediately and keep as quiet as possible. Drink plenty of water. The spot where the bit occurred should be painted with iodine or other antiseptic. Then send for the doctor.

Grasse Scouts Perfume All Over World

GRASSE, with its 20,000 inhabitants is the richest, most famed small town in France. It owes its wealth to the value which women place on perfume. There are 60 perfume establishments, each busily engaged in choosing and blending ingredients to make up new perfume scents.

Arcady Noel is typical of the perfumers of Grasse. When he creates a new scent, he composes it, much as a symphony is written, around a central theme.

His latest theme is the American career girl.

"The independent girl of the United States has inspired my newest perfume," he explains. "I've never been to America, but I hear that there are many such girls there, girls who are successful with careers and happily married, too. European women envy and admire these girls."

Mme. Jeanne Noel, M. Noel's wife and business partner, nodded.

The chemist added chunks of dark solids to the bright liquids of his compounds as he talked. It was a mysterious alchemy, the basis of a big business in France.

"This new perfume must be, therefore, arresting, modern, sultry and mysterious. But not too sweet."

The dominant note of "La Carrieriste" (Career Girl) is compounded of cyclamen and oak moss, with a sultry note stemming from the rose of Bulgaria.

But it was not so simple as that. There were other things about this perfume—the oils of jasmin, carnation, violet and orange blossom, the sharp definition arising from a blending of the jasmin and violet. In all, some 100 ingredients were chosen and blended for the creation of "La Carrieriste."

Yet Noel could not know, the moment he had finished his perfume, that it was good and worthy of the fine French reputation. First, the blend must be aged, like a choice wine. While it ages, one copy of its formula is kept in a vault in grasse, another goes to Paris, and a third is sent to a safe spot out of France.

Every year, more than 6000 tons of flowers harvested by women and children are made into essences. In addition, the yellow blossoms of the mimosa tree are flown out of nearby Nice by Air France to the flowers markets of Paris, London, Brussels and Amsterdam.

CRIME IN U.S.A.

Authorities Know Plenty Do Little

By DOUGLAS LARSEN

EVERY DETAIL of today's alarming U.S. crime situation is known or available to federal, state and local law enforcing agents. Yet the activities and huge profits of the underworld are still booming at the same rapid post-war rate.

Reports of various state crime commissions have linked specific individuals with scores of appalling acts of violence, as well as with the tremendously profitable, nationally organized gambling rackets which are the seat of all the trouble. Practically nothing has been done to prosecute them. Many courageous public officials have bared the details of local crime conditions. Many newspapers have also exposed local conditions.

FBI crime statistics have shown a steady increase of lawlessness since the war. The latest FBI report shows a rise of 76,600 major crimes in 1949 over 1948, for a total of 1,763,290 committed last year. That averages out to one major crime committed in the U.S every 17.9 seconds.

How can this paradox exist in a country which prides itself on maintaining law and order — so much being known about the facts of the crime wave, and so little being done about it?

AGENTS' EXPOSURE

Pioneer investigator and best-known authority on the problem is a former FBI agent, Virgil W. Peterson. As operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission he has done much of the spade work in exposing the big and little crooks involved in the country's gambling rackets.

Peterson has shown that the independent commission type of organization is the best device yet discovered for exposing the facts, at least, if not for putting the gangsters behind bars.

Realizing the nation-wide scope of the problem, with only parts of the story existing in any one city, 14 metropolitan newspapers have formed a crime-reporting syndicate to exchange information and to tell the broad story.

So shocked by the crime conditions they see around them, Congressmen are now probing the situation in Washington, D.C. So far they have turned up enough evidence of increases in sex crimes and other law violations to inspire plans for a $40,000 continuing investigation.

What could be the most important marshalling of the forces, and a major turning point, was the recent Attorney General's Conference on Organized Crime. It was called when various big city mayors asked for a chance to plead for help in their fight against crime.

Among the recommendations put forth at this meeting, which are now under study by special committees, are:

Laws to ban the sending of horse race results across state lines by telegraph, telephone or radio for illegal gambling purposes.

Federal laws to make illegal the interstate shipment of slot machines, other gambling devices, and their parts.

Extensions of the FBI's legal authority to permit that agency to lend needed assistance and information to state and local officials.

GARDENING

When You Spray, Do The Job Thoroughly

By CECIL SOLLY

DURING THE COMING WEEKS, practically everyone will buy some spray material for garden use in the control of insects and plant diseases. One of the most important things to remember is that, no matter what sort of spray material you use, it must be applied correctly to get the maximum effect.

There are two types of spray material, insecticides and fungicides. It is wise to use these two together always, but when doing so, check to assure yourself that the materials are compatible. The good sense of this is apparent when you realize than any spray job, well done, will eliminate many more troubles than the actual ones for which you spray. For instance, a spray job done this month will automatically control or prevent many troubles which come in May and June.

New growth needs protection, too, so it must be realized that any growth the plant made since the last spray job will need a spray application, or it is vulnerable to whatever may come along. When you mix the spray materials, be sure to follow the instructions on the can carefully.

Carelessness in making an improper mixture is responsible for much damage to plants when a too-strong spray solution is used. Inversely, when a too-weak solution is used, blame for a poor control is usually placed on the material.

CARE IS REQUIRED

When spraying, use a clean sprayer. Before mixing spray materials, it is wise to rinse out the can thoroughly; also the hose or tube. Check to see that the nozzle is rinsed and has been cleaned out for pieces of dirt or other material might clog the tiny holes. In spraying, use a strong pressure so that the material comes out evenly in a misty drench spray.

A careful and compete coverage of the whole plant or shrub is necessary. It is important that the spray reaches both the back and the front of the leaves. All new twigs and shoots should be given extra care and attention. The branches and main stem or trunk should also receive its share, but don't stop there—be quite sure to saturate the surrounding soil too.

Another very important thing to remember when spraying is that the timing of the job is of great importance. It is a waste of time and material to spray at all unless you are sure when the first sign of the infestation appears. Sometimes, pruning has to be resorted to before a spray job is done.

Some people by lack of time or neglect, often allow certain parts of plants to become badly affected by disease or pests before the spray job can be done. Should this happen, it must be remembered that a badly affected branch or shoot has little chance of staging a comeback and, quite often, its removal is advisable.

IMPORTANT DON'T

Don't use an oil-soaked rag on the end of a pole to destroy tent caterpillars. This will damage the branch severely and seldom gives a 100 per cent control.

Weeds are host plants for a multitude of insects and diseases. A great percentage of the common garden troubles migrate from one plant to another at Nature's designated seasons. A study of this happening is most interesting and would enable you to "date" the arrival of most garden pests and diseases and to spray your garden in advance for prevention.

Where possible, all weed hosts should be removed. Woods in the vacant lots and adjoining areas should also be sprayed to avoid hedge-hopping. One good way to assist in keeping your garden clean, as far as pests and disease is concerned is to persuade, encourage or cajole your neighbor to have a clean, well-sprayed garden, too.

TYPES OF SPRAYERS

The kinds of spray equipment are many. They range from the little quart hand sprayer to the large, pressure tank, mounted on wheels. For the average garden, the two-gallon or three-gallon pressure type is best. There are several hose attachment sprayers which can be used with great success where the house water pressure is good.

Extensions. Invariably, when one is spraying trees, some of the branches or leaves are missed because they were just out of reach. By the use of an extra two-foot extension (sometimes two can be used) sufficient height or reach may be obtained to drench the newest growth thoroughly.

Nozzles. The way the liquid spray is browen up into a cloud of fine mist or a coarser rain-like drench is determined by the nozzle. With each spray can, there are usually several nozzles of various sizes from coarse to fine. Use the one most suitable and watch that it does not clog.

Many spray materials, when mixed, are held in suspension in the water while others are dissolved. Many materials form a residue which will settle in the bottom of the can unless it is frequently agitated.

Wash out the spray can thoroughly with soda and water. The hose and attachments need cleansing, too.

"I won't believe it until I see it in black and white."

OVER 100 VARIETIES DAFFODILS

K. E. Christiansen has 125 varieties of daffodils on show at Saanich Road. They are all imported from Europe and they range in value from $35 to a few cents per bulb. His most valuable daffodil this year is "Chinese White," a large circular pure white flower with a small trumpet and bright green eye.

Trees Bring Beauty, But Selection Requires Care

By HENRY PREE

PROPERLY CHOSEN trees and shrubs are among the home owner's best friends as they afford beauty and permanence to the yard and garden, a welcome to the guest, and a profusion of colorful bloom throughout the season.

When considering new trees and shrubs the wise gardener does not place his order until he has learned their habit of growth, their hardiness and their adaptability to the desired location.

While it's somewhat confusing to the amateur to listen to the nurseryman's botanical names of plants it is his only way of differentiating between the various members of a plant family.

There are at least 10 varieties of forsythias listed by nurserymen. Some are poor in flower and habit of growth, one or two are weeping, while the flower buds of one splendid variety winter-kill so badly in the North that the plant seldom blooms. The best variety for northern areas is for sythia intermedia spectablis.

All varieties of privets do not make satisfactory hedges. The one called California sometimes freezes to the ground. The English one called vulgaris is subject to a disease. The best varieties are obtusifolium regelianum and amurense. It is a satisfaction to have the right variety growing in a hedge because in the beginning you thought before you purchased.

Mistakes are often made by beginning gardeners in buying evergreens. Little balled evergreens look attractive in their nursery row and seem to be just the plant for growing under a window.

Those cute "dwarf" trees you buy may turn out to be giants.

Unless some questions are asked about the habits of the plant, you are just likely to buy a plant that in 10 years' time will be a forest tree. It starts out as a dwarf, but it might cover up the whole house and block the light and view from the windows.

When choosing shade trees for the garden, learn their habits when they have matured. Trees like Norway maples and box elders provide such a dense shade that no other plants can grow under them. Soft maples, poplars and willows have such enormous root systems that they may block drains and take up all available plant food.

The elm and honey locust are high branched and do not have dense foliage. Likewise the elm is subject to two fatal diseases. Also think about planting nut trees for shade trees, and small growing trees such as the flowering dogwoods and flowering crabs. These latter plants will give bloom as well as providing share.

'River Camp' Wins Prize

HILDA M. RIDLEY, editor, Canadiana Magazine of Ottawa has announced Marjorie Freeman Campbell of Hamilton, Ontario, winner of the first prize in the 1949 annual poetry contest sponsored by the Macnab Historical Association, for her poem "River Camp."

Anne Marriott, well-known Victoria poetress and Allan Creighton, assistant editor of The Canadian Forum, were adjudicators.

Second prize was awarded Kathryn Munro of Toronto for "Heat-Wave" and third prize to Miss Isobel McFadden of Toronto for "Muskoka Dusk."

Honorable mention went to J. R. G. Adams, Toronto; Ethel Erroll Boyd, Calgary; Edna Wilma Slater; Saturna Island, B.C.; Freda Newton Bunner, Alliston, Ontario and John Bryant, Winnipeg.

The judges found most of the submitted poems readable and pleasant in sentiment but felt many suffered from unsatisfactory diction. The Macnab Poetry Award was established in 1943 by Macnab Historical Association to encourage Canadian poetry writers. There are cash and book prizes.

No Flower Gladdens Heart Like Fawn Lily

By ROBERT CONNELL

NO FLOWER gladdens our hearts in the spring like the white erythronium or fawn lily. The up-turned petals with their toothed blotches of bright yellow and maroon around the central clustered stamens and pistil are the delight of young and old, and in spite of the persistent pickings of past years it is really extraordinary what quantities of the plant are still to be found.

It seeds freely, and the shining leaves of young and old plants are themselves beautiful objects. Some are bright green with silvery patches, others are a darker green with darker markings of maroon.

In protected corners, even of gardens, it is surprising how this plant flourishes and increases and, indeed, I have known it to be regarded almost as a weed, lovely as it is, because of its persistent spreading from flower-bed to flower-bed, even coming up in the paths.

BY MANY NAMES

The erythroniums are widespread in the northern hemisphere from Japan and Formosa to western Europe, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They vary in color from white to yellow and pink and purplish red. A common English name is dog's-tooth-violet, sometimes used here, but originally applied to the only European species. The "dog's-tooth" probably refers to the white underground bulbs. Its name of "violet" refers to the color of the flower of that species which is a "rosy-purple or lilac."

We have two species on the Island, the white already referred to, and the pink, or, botanically, Erythronium oregonum and E. revolutum. The latter is of a beautiful rosy pink color and is one of our loveliest flowers. I first saw it one Sunday morning years ago at Campbell River where a bowlful of them lit up a schoolroom table. Unfortunately, whenever a convenient locality is known as harboring this fawn lily it is apt to be speedily despoiled, so that one is compelled to keep such things to one's self.

The pink fawn lily was first discovered by Archibald Menzies at Nootka Sound in the year 1788 apparently. His specimen is at Kew Royal Botanic Gardens where more than a century ago the great botanist Hooker examined it and noted that "the indefatigable and venerable Menzies was the first to discover this fine and very distinct species."

It is probable that Menzies saw the pink fawn-lily about the same time he came so suddenly on the little rufous humming-bird, the male of the species which makes its brief but spectacular visit to war coast about the same time as the fawn-lilies bloom. Out of a bush "darted a radiant creature like a flame of fire, and passed close by him as though it would attack his face, returning again and again to the charge and whirling about in the utmost fury." The glowing male humming-birds come to us in our gardens, but the loveliest and rarest of our flowers have to be sought out. Well are we repaid for our greatest trouble, even if we bring away only the memory of things seen and loved.

Hollywood is doing everything that's not in the astronomy books. Eagle-Lion has "The Sun Sets at Dawn" and Loretta Young's husband, Tom Lewis, will produce "The Sun Stood Still."

PROTECT DISHES

You can make a drainboard mat to protect dishes by cutting up an old Turkish towel and binding it with tape.

First Spring Garden Crop Is Appetizing Radish

RADISHES are sown in almost every garden at least once. That once is enough to discourage many gardeners, because so often when the crop matures they have to throw away most of it.

The reason is the radish is one of the earlier vegetables, because it grows so fast. From seed to harvest is 20 days for the small globe type. Having rushed to maturity, it just keeps on rushing, and within a week the root turns pithy and the plants begin to think of going to seed. That's when the discouraged gardener digs most of the long row he planted and throws the roots away.

In the case of the early globe type sow a week's supply at a time, which should be about six or seven feet in the row. Remember this type does not like hot weather, so stop in time to avoid that, and change to a midseason variety.

If you want a supply all summer, sow a late summer variety for hot weather. But frequent sowings in small lots is a good rule for all except winter radishes which take two months to mature and remain good for six weeks. They grow very large, some weighing several pounds.

Harvesting the first radishes gives home gardeners a thrill.

WAR STILL RAGES IN JUNGLE

Bogged in the mud. Can't have a war without it.

Jungle army's "heavy equipment" moves out.

Indo-China Resists The Communists

There are spots on this earth where even today cold war would appear quite a pleasant state of affairs. Such a one is in French Indo-China, scene of a bloody jungle war in which ancient methods and modern frightfulness mingle side by side.

The pictures on this page will bring back disturbing memories to Canadians who fought in the Pacific in the eruptive forties.

But these pictures were taken in 1950. They show stretcher cases being lugged painfully through the inescapable jungle bush. Then there's the heavy truck bogged hopelessly down in the mud. There's the frantic building of somewhat primitive pilboxes and barricades. And, perhaps the most familiar sight of all in the Indo-China war, are the elephants carrying native troops and equipment into the front line. The elephants in this sort of jungle warfare are the equivalent of the heavy tank.

What's it all about? On the one side the Viet-Namese fighters who are backed by the French, and on the other side are the soldiers of Commander Ho Chi Minh. The Viet-Minhs are Communists who are playing their minor role towards the complete domination by Russian inspired communism.

This indeed may be the prologue to another major conflict. Who knows?

'Pud Annuder Niggle In' Sells Millions For Bounced Composer

By RICHARD KLEINER

EVERYTHING was perfectly normal at Steinway Hall one morning last November. The grand pianos on display were grander than ever, shimmering in highly polished beauty. The dignified salesman walked quietly on plushy carpets, gently steering mink-coated ladies from one model to another.

Nobody paid any attention to two men who walked in. One was tall and good-looking. The other wasn't. They headed straight for a piano and the smaller man sat down and began to play and sing:

"Pud annuder niggle in, to der niggleodoen—"

That's as far as Stephen Weiss got with the first public performance of "Music! Music! Music!," the song that's now number one on almost any listing of popular tunes. The dignified salesmen hurried over, muttering something about such behaviour being disgraceful, and bounced the two.

The other man was Howard Richmond, an embyro music publisher. Richmond, for more than 13 years a successful publicist for bands and vocalists, had published one song a few months before, the hit novelty, "Hop Scotch Polka."

Then, just before the incident in Steinway Hall, Weiss walked in to his cubby-hole office. He wanted to interest Richmond in the song he and a youngster named Bernie Baum had written. He explained that he had written hit songs, like "They Say," and "Angel in Disguise," and he felt sure that his new tune would be a sensation.

But Richmond wasn't particularly interested in new songs. He had one, it was making him money and, besides, he was tone deaf and didn't know the first thing about music. He found, however, that the Austrian-born Weiss was difficult to brush:

"We don't have a piano here," Richmond said. "How'll I listen when we don't have a piano?"

Weiss remembered that Steinway Hall was right downstairs, so down they went. After they were bounced, Richmond bluffed his way into a rehearsal hall. A porter and a charwoman were cleaning up as Weiss pounded out his song. They both began to tap their feet and Richmond sat up and took notice.

He talked Weiss down from the $1000 advance he wanted to $1, had the song pressed in about 50 records, sent them out in mid-December to his disc jockey friends—and nothing happened.

He began to close his office and went to Chicago where he was press-agenting Frank Sinatra. By the first week in January, however, long-distance phones began to ring. The disc jockeys, as a favor to their old friend Richmond, had played the song once or twice. The public screamed for more. They wanted to buy the sheet music, but there was none. The song wasn't even copyrighted.

When Richmond found that back orders for the sheet music totaled 118,000, he reopened his office and was back in business as a music publisher. And he plans to stay in business.

It ordinarily takes an established publisher anywhere from six weeks to six months, plus about $35,000, to put over a hit tune. It took about four weeks and less than $400 for "Music! Music! Music!" to go over.

"But it was all luck," Richmond says. "I realize that."

One recording is over a million in sales, others are approaching that figure, sheet music sales will come to about a half-million and the song is now number one in England, too, despite the fact that they have neither "nickles" nor nickleodeons" there.

All they seem to want, as the song says, is music, music, music.

NEW FRENCH GIRL SAYS 'NO' TO FILM SWOON BOYS

An Vernon, Hollywood's zingy new French package is not at all sure about American swoon boys. When she left France she thought she had completed her education about men. Now she is not so sure.

She told Erskine Johnson, our Hollywood correspondent:

"Een Hollywood, a beeg star take me driveeing. He try to keess me. I poosh heem away and he say to me, 'Are you MAD? I don't mind he try, eet ees the job of a man to try to make love, but tell me, why is he offended when you don't want to kees heem?

"I deesn't slap hees face. I only say no. Thees Hollywood men, they are spoiled by women, spoiled. Frenchmen never try first time out to make love. Frenchman talk and talk and talk the first time."

Ann's the kind of French pastry who means it when she says, "Ma'is, non."

She even said it to Orson Welles in Paris, when he asked her to play Desdemonda in his "Othello" film production.

"I was fasceenated by thees man," Ann sighed.

For Mother

Mother's Day fashions designed to flatter mature figures offer cool comfort for the warm weather months to come. Black and white printed chiffon dress (left) has a full skirt posed over a white built-in slip. Double layers of white organdy form the triple-tiered collar. Grey printed voile (centre) swings a circular skirt and has full sleeves caught in a tight cuff at the elbow. Organdy facing is used to give crispness to the double petal-shaped collar. Softly tailored pin-checked gingham (right) has a skirt, darted at the sides and back for an easy fit. Notched white pique collar sharpens the neckline of the jacket, which is fastened with pearl buttons.

By KAY SHERWOOD

LEADING the promenade on Mother's Day are fashions designed to flatter the mature figure.

Soft sheers or more tailored cotton suits owe their easy fit to the clever placement of tucks and darts at the hipline and under the bustline. Sleeves are set into deep armholes or, in some cases cut in one with the bodice, to eliminate binding around the upper arm. Styling interest is often concentrated at the neckline. Tiered collars of organdy, rolled shawl collars, scalloped white pique or tucked facings on jackets pep up simple silhouettes.

One of the leading designers of clothes for the mature figure, Ed Garrick, satisfies the feminine yen for a pretty sheer print with voile and chiffon printed in small all-over patterns of neutral gray or black and white. For greater comfort, sheer dresses come equipped with built-in slips.

Brown and white pin-checked gingham, tailored as trimly as fine wool, makes cool suits for warm weather. Even sun-back dresses, cut with broad shoulder straps, could step out on the city street thanks to long-sleeved jackets that button up the front.

Let Beauty Go To Your Head

FOR YEARS, doctors have been advocating that women relax with their feet up. As a beauty aid, this position can be used to good advantage. Nature did not intend that your blood should rush to your feet all of the time.

Whenever you have the time, get out your ironing board, prop one end up on the seat of a divan or sturdy upholstered chair, and let the other end of the board rest on the floor. Then lie down on the board, feet up, for 10 or 15 minutes. Stay there longer if you can afford the time.

The blood will rush out of your tired feet and back to your head, acting as a beauty stimulant. If your ironing board is not detachable, lie down on the floor with pillows placed under you so that you achieve a nearly straight line from shoulders to feet. Your feet, of course, will be propped on a chair seat.

You'll find that, after practicing this daily, your hair and skin will look and feel better.

When Junior Makes A Mess It May Be Creative Art

A three-year-old may make more mess than sense when he's turned loose with paints or modelling clay, but he should be encouraged in his creative attempts in spite of the confusion.

"Creative abilities can be smothered or developed at a very early age," explained Edith L. Mitchell, Delaware state director of art education.

"Don't always give them playthings you can buy at a store. See that they have a few pieces of wire, some string, a cardboard box — anything that has color and form," she explained.

She told about the child whose mother gave him the cardboard roller from the centre of a paper towel roll.

"It became a tunnel to the child," she said.

A group of youngsters in one of Miss Mitchell's classes made an eagle from corn husks and pieces of wire.

EASY TO DISCOURAGE

"Don't suggest that the child make something which you've seen someone else make but help him to work out ideas of his own," she said. "Imitation is easy."

Criticism or lack of interest aren't the only way parents can discourage their child's creative attempts. Minor disasters such as spilling paints on the living room rug, ruining a paper doll because the scissors don't work well can thwart a budding artist, according to Miss Mitchell. She said:

"Let them paint in a place that won't be damaged if they spill. They won't go back to painting for a long time if they have a feeling of guilt or a remembrance of punishment."

As for materials, she believes, "they should be the best you can buy. A paint brush should not come apart and the scissors should be good and sturdy. If the tools don't work properly the child, like an adult, loses interest."

Miss Mitchell, in New York to attend the annual conference of the Committee on Art Education, was backed up in her statements by an exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art.

Packets of creative play equipment, tested in the children's art education classes at the museum, were displayed. One college materials box contained small pieces of cloth, cardboard, sponge, fur, bits of rope and sheets of colored gelatine and colored paper. Another collection of unexpected pieces of wood, wire screening and feathers was for creating three-dimensional forms.

Children from three to 12 have shown surprising ingenuity in pasting together patterns and forms.

Home Was Never Just Like This

By RUTH MILLETT

LIKE A LOT of other women I can't resist the big, fat, slick home decorating magazines that blossom each month on the newsstands.

Inside the pages of the decorating journal lies a never-never land most housewives like to think they'll some day achieve.

It's a land where houses are beautiful, luxurious backgrounds for the folk who are supposed to live in them.

Nothing spoils the lovely pictures. The dog lies in complete content on the lovely carpet but he has left no muddy footprints.

Father stands tall and handsome looking tenderly into the eyes of his beautiful wife, who hasn't a hair out of place even though she has just placed the last steaming dish on a candle-lit table.

The children are always playing quietly, absorbed with building blocks or an electric train. No toy but the one they are playing with is ever in sight.

ALWAYS IMMACULATE

No ash tray is ever in need of being emptied. No room ever looks as though it should be "picked up." No kitchen has a sink full of dirty dishes.

Life inside the decorating magazine is always pictured as being effortless, charming, gracious.

No wonder the harried housewife loves to leaf through the pages idly. It's all so different from her own world.

Yet she can always tell herself that as soon as Johnny gets a little older, or she can afford to do over the living room, or she has time to get busy with a paint brush, her home will be more like the pictures. She can dream, can't she?

Adults are the ones who get confused.

"We tested a collection of the materials on a children's class," explained Victor D'Amico, educational director of the museum. "They walked right to the table and started picking up different pieces.

We did the same thing with an adult class. They walked to the table and stood with their hands behind them."

Brush Your Skin For Beauty

By ALICIA HART

UNLESS YOUR SKIN is extremely sensitive, it can stand one thorough washing with soap and water every day, plus several cool water rinsings. Washing with mild soap and soft water is essential for thoroughly removing all traces of cosmetics.

Washing removes dirt, of course, but it also takes away surface oil. For a complete cleansing of your pores, therefore, try a complexion brush. It will, in addition to getting your face clean, help tone your skin by stimulating a flow of blood to the surface.

It isn't necessary to wield the brush with a heavy hand. A gentle but firm rotary motion will get results. Concentrate on the areas where fat glands are most active, particularly the area around the nose and chin.

Make a mask of the soap lather and let it stay on your face for a few minutes. Rinse thoroughly with warm water and finish off with a cold water rinse. Be sure you choose a mild soap which lathers well, such as a cold cream soap. And if the water in your area is hard, soften it by adding one teaspoon of cooking soda and one teaspoon of borax to a basin of water.

Muscle Flexibility Vital To Success

Conducted by ACE PERCIVAL

AT THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION Research Laboratory at the University of Illinois, the many world-famous experts on the laboratory staff have been coming up with many interesting and helpful discoveries. Recently they conducted a study of several hundred young successful athletes to find out what were the things that were most needed to be a successful athlete. They discovered that one of the most important factors was flexibility in certain key areas of the body.

They found that when an athlete was stiff or short muscled in certain parts of his body the possibility of him becoming an outstanding athlete was quite low. They found this to be true no matter in what game the athlete was interested. However they also found out that a great deal could be done to improve his flexibility in these key parts of the body.

No matter how old you are, or what game you are planning to participate in this spring and summer, I suggest you go to work for the next few weeks in an attempt to improve your flexibility in the key areas of your body. By doing this you will greatly improve your chances of developing new levels of skill.

In this week's column I'll give you several fundamental drills designed to increase the flexibility of those muscles that must be long, loose and flexible if you are to develop the highest possible athletic efficiency.

The parts of the body in which the average athlete lacks flexibility are: 1. The back of the legs, particularly behind the knee and at the back of the upper thigh; 2. In the hips; 3. In the back.

The following drills will, if done regularly and enthusiastically, do a great deal to improve your flexibility in these areas and will also act as a test that will show you just how you rate in flexibility. It will surprise me if anyone reading this column can do all of them perfectly the first time.

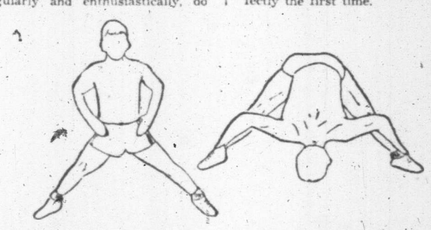
To join just send a letter saying you would like to be a member, c-o Victoria Daily Times. If you like you can sign up your whole team, club, school or town.



This is a great flexibility exercise for the lower back, the hips and the back leg muscles. First, stand with your feet as wide apart as you can get them, as in Diagram 1. Then, keeping your knees stiff, reach down and grab hold of your ankles. Then try to pull your upper body down so that your head touches the ground. When you have pulled yourself down as far as you can, return to your original position and repeat. Do this ten times. It will be difficult at first, but you will be surprised at how your flexibility will improve as you continue to do the exercises regularly. If it is very difficult for you, work especially hard because this will show your great need.

This is the best possible exercise for developing muscle length and flexibility in the back of the legs and is one of the best exercises ever designed for athletes of all types. Take up position shown in Diagram 1, feet flat on the ground, knees well bent, palms of the hands flat on the ground. Then, keeping your feet and palms flat on the ground straighten your legs. As you straighten your legs, try to place all your weight on your hands. Do this ten times. At first you will find it difficult so start off by placing your hands well in front of your feet, then as you improve try to do the exercise with your hands closer to your feet until you can do it with the palms of your hands just in front of your toes. Do the exercise slowly. Two other drills with illustrations will be included in next week's column.

A Bedouin of the Syrian Desert

Honesty Not Strong Point With Bedouins Of Desert

By UNCLE RAY

THE NAME "BEDOUIN" means "dweller in the desert." To this day many Bedouins spend most of their time moving about the desert. Thanks chiefly to sunshine, Bedouins have brownish skins. They are classed as members of the white race, and would be more nearly white if it were not for tanning. To some extent they have mixed with people of darker skins, but at least we may call them "mainly white."

Bedouins are not so tall as the average white man, but they are lean and fairly strong. They are expert riders, and have a strong love of liberty.

Central Arabia is the homeland of the Bedouins. They have spread to Syria and Irak, also to Egypt and other parts of northern Africa, but their first known home is the heart of Arabia.

Bedouins of the desert have tent colonies. In a camp there may be only 15 or 20 tents, and these are likely to be moved every week or two.

Camels are the animals which these people most often take with them while they travel about the desert. Those who live in an oasis, or at the edge of a desert, also raise cattle, sheep and goats.

HABIT OF STEALING

A bad thing about the Bedouins is their habit of stealing. They go forth on raids, and ride scores of miles to find a camp from which they can take livestock.

If you asked them why they are robbers, perhaps they would reply: "Last year the people in two camps came and stole some of our livestock. So we are just taking revenge on them."

That sort of "revenge" can keep going on and on. It has been popular for hundreds of years in Arabia.

The Bedouins follow a rule that they will steal camels only after the month when the young have been weaned. That may sound queer, but it is common sense. If young camels live, there will be more camels to steal the next year.

MANY SHAVE HEADS

Many Bedouin men are in the custom of shaving their heads, but they usually grow beards. Like other Arabs, they are Mohammedans and "swear by the beard."

Bedouins keep herds of livestock in some areas, and use cattle and goats to supply milk and meat. They also eat vegetables and honey. When short of other food, they eat locusts and lizards.

Although many Bedouins still follow a roaming desert life, there are others who have settled down. Thousands live in fixed homes in Syria, Egypt and elsewhere. They raise crops, and have fairly good farms. Even among the farmers a bit of plow-stealing takes place, but walls have been built around some farms, and care is taken to "watch out for robbers."

FIRST AID FOR LINO

Seams on linoleum floors can be successfully sealed and smoothed over by running a strip of cellophane tape down the full length of the crack. By using shellac over the tape, the surface will hold up for an indefinite period of time. The shellac coat will prevent dirt from seeping through.

SAFETY FROM GLASS

Splinters of glass may be picked up safely with a cotton ball dampened with water.

WATCH FOR GRIT

Alcohol is the best agent for removing dirt and grease from the composition tops of metal furniture. To clean metal furniture, just go over it with a damp rag, then a dry one. Beware of harsh, gritty compounds which may scratch the chrome surface.

STARS 'N STRIPES—Lovely Joan and Mary Hull do things for zebra stripes that the zebras could never do. They wear them in two pieces on the sands at Daytona Beach, Fla.

FOR STAMP COLLECTORS

Britain Tries New Stamp Market To Raise Dollars

By R. NAYNE

THE BRITISH COLONIAL OFFICE is going to open up a Philatelic Branch in Washington for the convenience of American dealers. Stamps will not be stocked but orders can be taken which will be filled in London and sent out to the Washington branch for distribution at face value.

Stamps will be sold to dealers only and in wholesale quantities, at least one complete sheet of any value having to be taken.

The idea is of course to bring in more dollars to Britain but in the long run this cheapening of British Colonial stamps may have the opposite effect. Collectors like to think that their stamps have some association with the country they are supposed to come from. There is nothing very exotic about a label purporting to hail from, say, the Solomon Is., when you know that it has been sent direct from the printers in London to the Agency in Washington — especially when you may have to pay a couple of dollars for it!

NEWS FROM "DOWN UNDER"

Australian ½d and 2d coil stamps without watermark are now appearing in the stamp vending machines.

A new commemorative honoring the explorer, Kennedy, is soon to be issued.

The 3½d U.P.U., now obsolete, had a total printing of 5,084,688 copies.

The new 2½d George VI stamp which came out on April 12 will be followed on June 12 by a 1½d showing a new portrait of the Queen.

New Zealand's 1950 "Health" stamps will feature a portrait of Princess Elizabeth with Prince Charles.

Fiji will follow the example of New Zealand in the matter of having "Health" stamps, and bring out a couple of these charity issues towards the end of the year. They will be sold for 2d and 3d respectively, and in each instance 1d will go to the War Memorial Anti-T.B. fund, the balance being for postage.

Canada may shortly issue a stamp to commemorate the Tercentenary of the Canadian Jesuit Martyrs.

This is a new issue for Cyrenaica, the one-time Italian colony now under mandate to Britain. The design shows a Mujahid warrior.

PEOPLE VS. FOOD

Malthusianism — expounded by Thomas B. Malthus, is a theory of social economy which asserts that it is the universal tendency for population to increase more rapidly than means of subsistence.

NOT RESTRICTED

A presidential elector does not have to vote for the official candidate of his party. The Constitution specifies that each state select its own electors, who then are free to vote for anyone they choose. However, it is the general practice for electors to vote for their party's official candidate.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Greedy Grabs At Discards Can Mess Up Partner's Game

"PLEASE settle an argument for us," pleads a Sidney reader. "A friend of ours tried a new one the other night, and she got very angry when we stopped her.

"She needed 50 points for her first meld. The card at the top of the discard pile was a nine. This player did not draw, but she put down three aces and then tried to take the discard pile with a nine and a joker.

"We stopped her from taking the pile, but it took three of us to hold her down. She was a lovely quiet girl before Canasta entered her life, so it's up to you to straighten her out."

Fine thing! Anybody has a right to get violent when she needs 120 points, but this business of raising Cain when you need only 50 points is carrying matters too far. Tut, tut, young lady.

My Sidney correspondent was, of course, quite correct. The girl did not have the right to take the discard pile.

The rule is that you are allowed to take the discard pile with one matching card and a wild card only if your side has made the initial meld at a previous turn of play.

For example, if your partner makes an initial meld, you may take the discard pile with a matching card and a wild card. If you make the initial meld yourself, you must wait until your next turn before you can use a wild card to take the discard pile.

The other night I watched a famous radio star mangle a hand. Both sides needed 120 points, and the pile built up to a nice size before my friend managed to take the pile and make a first meld.

Well, you'd think he'd get enough points out of that hand to win the game, but he didn't. The trouble was that he just couldn't keep his fingers off the discard pile.

Each time it came around to him it contained exactly four cards.

After a while his partner began to sweat. He still had his original eleven cards, and it looked as though he'd never get a chance to pick up any more. Whenever the discard pile came around to him it contained only two cards—no bargain.

Finally my friend's partner made a risky discard. There were only three cards in the discard pile, but the opponent swooped down on it with gurgles of glee. He made a meld of 120 points, his partner speedily completed a canasta, and they were out on the next round.

My singing friend's partner had good reason to be annoyed. When you pick up a big discard pile, don't be a hog. Let your partner get a few cards into his hand. When the next pile, containing only four cards, comes around to you, pass it up. That will give your partner a chance at a six-card discard pile.

When your partner seems to have trouble getting the discard pile, put down a new meld or two. The idea is not to deplete your own hand, but to make it hard for the next player to find a discard that doesn't give the pile to your partner.

BRIDGE

'Larceny Lou' Pulled Fast One And Got Away With It

By OSWALD JACOBY

LARCENY LOU is a hard man to play against. In a business deal his word is all the contract you need, but not at the bridge table. He steals tricks left and right, and he manages to look surprised if you call him a crook.

West opened the jack of clubs, East naturally put up the king, and Lou dropped his queen automatically.

It was clear to East, of course, that if South really had no more clubs, it would be fatal to continue the suit. If East led the ace of clubs, South would (he feared) ruff it. This would set up dummy's ten.

So East shifted to the nine of hearts. And that was the end of that hand.

Lou won with the ace of hearts and drew trumps. Then he knocked out the ace of diamonds. If East wanted his ace of clubs, he could take it. Otherwise, he could get out with a heart and allow South to discard a club on dummy's extra diamond. Either way the defence could take only two top clubs and the ace of diamonds.

Of course you've noticed what would have happened if East had continued the clubs. His partner would have shown out on the second round of the suit. Then East would lead a third round and give his partner a club ruff. Eventually the ace of diamonds would set the contract.

Maybe you've noticed that East would surely keep on with the clubs if Lou had dropped a small club at the first trick. It would be the natural line of play.

If you're really fast, you've also seen that East should have been able to see through the little plot. If Lou were telling the truth, West had the rest of the clubs. This meant that he had led the jack from an original holding of jack-five-four.

A good player doesn't lead high from such a holding in his partner's suit. He leads the lowest card.

Hence East should have known that his partner could not have the two low clubs left in his hand. In other words, Larceny Lou was trying to pull a fast one.

Choose Room Colors Wisely

By ELEANOR ROSS

THERE are more paint colors than ever before, and one friend says that it is like letting a kid loose in a candy shop for her to even look at the hundreds of shades now available.

So with the hundreds of colors to choose from, selecting a color scheme becomes a problem, unless sane and sober consideration, aided by one's preferences, the type of room to be decorated, prevails. Chances are that when all is said and done, the best choice is the color with which you and your family are happiest.

NORTH ROOM

Next comes the exposure of the room. A cold, north room does need warmth and color, and even if you adore pale blue or pale gray, you just wouldn't think of using such shades in such a room. Vivid colors are called for, such shades as sunny yellow, a warm gray with plenty of red in it, and then some complementary green shades to accent the main color.

While east rooms do get early morning sun, warm colors are in order, too, but not necessarily such deep tones as for a true northern exposure.

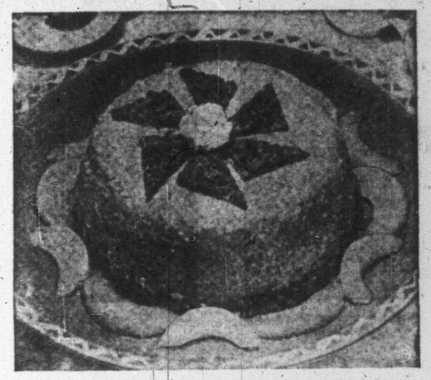
STRONG COLORS

Keep away from strong colors in rooms with a western exposure which means strong afternoon sun. Blues balanced with warm neutral tones, go well for such rooms.

Sun-drenched southern exposures call for deep, cool colors with mellowed highlights to soften the effect. Green with off shades of yellow is a good choice for such rooms. After all, there's plenty of room left for expressing your color preferences in floor coverings, upholstery and drapery.

Two magnificent tropical vegetation pictures give a warm, pulsating bit of color to a room with a northern exposure.

Cheese Bavarian Is Novel Dessert



CHEESE BAVARIAN is a novel combination of cottage cheese, fruit and cream with a rye crumb crust.

Try It With Rye Crumb Toast

LOOKING for a fresh-tasting spring dessert, easy to eat, lovely to look at? We've got it—a combination of two plentiful dairy foods, cottage cheese and cream, and canned cling peaches, also on the plentiful list.

Cheese Bavarian
(Serves 8)

Two cups cottage cheese, 2 egg yolks, ¾ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, 1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin, 1 package cherry-flavored gelatin, 1 No. 1 can (2 cups) sliced cling peaches, ¼ cup lemon juice, 1 tablespoon lemon rind, 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1 cup cream, whipped.

Drain cottage cheese to remove excess moisture. Combine egg yolks, sugar, salt and milk; cook over boiling water until mixture thickens. Drain peaches and reserve for garnish. Heat ½ cup of the peach juice and dissolve gelatin in it. Add hot milk mixture, stir until blended. Blend in cottage cheese, lemon juice and rind. Fold in egg white and whipped cream.

Transfer to deep six-inch mold (1½-quart size). Top with rye crumb crust. Chill for at least two hours. When ready to serve dip mold in warm water and turn out on serving plate. Garnish, if desired with toasted buttered rye wafer triangles, and a bit of cottage cheese. Surround with cling peach slices.

Rye Crumb Crust

One cup crisp wafer crumbs (about 15 wafers), ½ cup melted butter, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg.

Mix ingredients together. Use with cottage cheese Bavarian.

Sunday Treat

FOR A SUNDAY treat, old-fashioned strawberry shortcake is always welcome. Use your favorite biscuit dough with a little extra shortening. To serve, split warm biscuits in half, remove some of the soft part, then butter. Cover with slightly sweetened fresh strawberries. Use heavy or whipped cream.

For a big party — an announcement or wedding party, try strawberries Romanoff.

I asked my friend, Nino, maitre d'hotel of the elegant Drake Room in New York City, how to prepare it.

He had a table rolled before me. There were red strawberries and a few sweet figs in a bowl set in ice; in another French ice cream. There was also a bowl of chilled whipped cream and one of crushed macaroons.

With a fork he punctured the berries. "Allow about eight for each person." He poured 2 ounces of port wine over them. He was making four servings. Next he added two cups of whipped cream to the berries, poured in 3 ounces of brandy and added two scoops of ice cream. Gently he blended all these things and piled the nectar into four serving plates. On top of each he sprinkled the crushed macaroons and a teaspoon of Grand Marnier.

QUICK CALL FOR ICE

As soon as grease is spilled on the kitchen floor, pour ice water over it immediately. That will make it harden before it has a chance to soak into the linoleum or wood. You can then scrape it off with a dull, flat-bladed table knife.

Make Use Of May Plentifuls

MAY MARKETS will be abundant. Among the popular foods in plentiful supply will be eggs, pork and pork products; also manufactured dairy foods, peanut butter.

There will be many abundant vegetables, too, including cabbage, onions, carrots, and tomatoes. Canned corn, lima beans and canned peaches, dry beans and peas, as well as prunes and raisins, are also on the list of May plentifuls.

So are light and heavy chickens and fresh and frozen fish.

That's the good news from the production and market branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This list should be used by housewives as a guide to thrifty purchases.

Here's the complete list of May plentifuls:

Vegetables: Cabbage, carrots, lettuce, onions, potatoes (late crop), tomatoes, canned corn, canned lima beans, dry beans, dry peas.

Fruits: Canned peaches, dried prunes, raisins.

Poultry Foods: Eggs, broilers, fryers, hens.

Other Foods: Cooking fat, honey, peanut butter, fish (fresh and frozen), manufactured dairy products, pork and pork products.

PREFER LOOPY TOWELS

The loops of a towel determine largely its absorbency. Look for towels with loops which are set fairly close together and which are quite long. Long loops make a towel soft and fluffy.

Spring Cleaning Reduces Fire Risk

By GALE DUGAS

SPRING, time of the annual cleaning offensive, is also the best time to get rid of household fire hazards, according to the U.S. National Board of Fire Underwriters. Of the 400,000 fires which damage or destroy homes yearly, 90 per cent are started by carelessness or neglect.

Among the common causes of home fires are collections of combustible rubbish, an accumulation of oily rags or paint cloths, and home dry cleaning with gasoline.

Begin spring cleaning by throwing out everything — old newspapers, magazines, discarded furniture which is no longer usable, the board advises. Such junk not only causes fires, it adds fuel to the flames once a fire is under way.

When you clean up, don't attempt your own dry cleaning. Never keep gasoline, benzine, or naptha in the house. If you insist on being your own dry cleaner, use a safe cleaning fluid, one approved by the board.

Next, check your electric cords for frayed or worn spots. Poor places for cord are under a rug, over a nail or any spot where friction or wear can develop. At the same time, check your electrical appliances — toaster, iron, coffee maker, vacuum cleaner — for any possible repairs. If repairs are needed, don't turn the job over to your husband. Fire statistics show that however fondly men may regard themselves as amateur electricians, they often approach the business with more enthusiasm than skill.

Rags which have been soaked in paint or oil heat up from chemical action and frequently, fire follows. If you must use rags more than once, keep them in closed metal containers. Hang up mops and paint-soiled clothing so that air can circulate around them. And always clean up promptly after spring painting jobs.

While you're about it, check the fuses, pipes and chimneys. These are three leading fire causes.

Nine fires out of ten could be prevented by caution and common sense, according to the National Board.

Spring is the time to clear out combustible rubbish, which may cause a fire. Check attic and basement for such debris.

LOWER YOUR GOLF HANDICAP WITH GENE SARAZEN

Play a medium iron more off the middle.

With the two or three, the stance is wider

Play the tee shot directly off the left heel.

Stance Widens To Assure Balance For Longer Shots

By GENE SARAZEN
Winner of Them All

Next to the grip, the stance is the most important part of golf.

Essentially the stance is the same for every club. It varies with the pitch of the iron and length of the shaft.

Putting is a different phase and will be treated separately.

Practicing your stance, start short. That is, work first with the seven, eight and nine irons.

These are the shortest clubs in your bag, and the stance should be more open.

By open, we mean dropping the left foot back a bit off the line of flight, permitting the body to be turned slightly toward the hole

Short irons do not require a full swing.

Body action is at a minimum, a full pivot unnecesary.

The ball is played off the right heel with the feet close together.

The longer the shot, play the ball more toward the left heel, your stance widening because proper balance is needed for the wider arc and flatter swing.

The five iron is played just about in the middle, feet widened to the width of the shoulders.

The V's formed by the thumb and forefinger of each hand always point toward the right shoulder.

The shorter the club, the more upright the swing. Thus you must stand closer to the ball.

Always reach for the ball, but not to such a degree that is disrupts your comfort.

Note in the illustration the gradual evolution of the stance.

On the left, with a medium iron, the ball is about centered.

The body lean is more pronounced, the swing more upright.

With a long iron, a two or three, the stance is wider. The ball is played nearer the left heel. The body is more upright.

The tee shot is played directly off the left heel, the body square to the line of flight.

The stance is wide to insure balance for the flat, sweeping swing.

Old Glamour Gone For Test Pilots

By FRED ZAVATTERO

Old-time test pilots, like the planes they flew, have been scrapped. Highly-trained men who can handle an engineer's "slip-stick" as well as a "joystick" have taken their place.

Aviation's pioneers claim the newcomers don't even look like flyers, not to mention test pilots. The coffee shop office is gone. Today's test engineers have offices and wear company identification buttons. One veteran of 30 years test-flying reports, with horror: They even punch a time clock."

Elliott Merrill, one of the few surviving 25-year veterans and acting chief test pilot at the Boeing plant in Seattle, explains the change. "Most early test pilots had no training. Their stock in trade was courage and nerve," he says. "That's not enough today."

Aircraft design and production have reached a stage where aeronautical engineers and designers must have exact, scientific reports of performance.

Most airplane manufacturers now require test pilots to have special training.

The new test pilot spends long hours at his desk compiling reports, statistics and other data necessary to the production of foolproof airplanes.

Under this new flight testing system, the test pilot and crew are assigned to the plane while it's still on the drawing board. When the plane is past the design stage, the test crew follows the construction in detail. They ask questions and are questioned. Every part is analyzed.

It may be two years or more before the plane is ready for a flight test, but the crew knows every nut and bolt in it.

Western Movies Should Be Like Opera Without The Horse

BY PAUL GALLICO

THE UP AND COMING CITY of Reno, Nevada, has announced its intentions of celebrating a Western Film Festival annually in which it will award silver spurs and saddles, its own type of Oscar, for the best Horse Opera as well as the favorite Western star. I am all for this and will discuss this affair in a later article, but right now it has served to bring something to mind about which I have been meaning to speak to you and the producers ever since I have acquired my television set.

Briefly, it is that I want the Hoss Opry, or Western Movie, standardized down to one story, one plot, one set of characters. I am willing to have this story played by different companies, various stars, different actors, horses, settings, etc., but I definitely demand an end to the confusion resulting from the attempt of various writers, producers and directors to infuse variety into something which is a beautiful, perfect and finished artistic endeavor and upon which there can be no improvement.

No proprietor of a modern television set can very well help not becoming an expert on the Westerns these days, and I am no exception. You know how it is, you go fiddling with the knobs or cranks of the infernal machine to see what's on, and all of a sudden you find yourself watching a rousing brawl at the Golden Gulch saloon with a guy being socked on the potato on the balcony and winding up on his neck at the bottom of the stairs, or the gun fight is taking place in the streets of Rawhide, Arizona, or the chase is winding in and out of the California hills.

COMPELS INTEREST

Coming thus upon a stirring bit of action I defy anyone to tune out until the villanous proprietor of the Fandango Saloon Dance Hall and Gambling Den is stone dead with a half hundred-weight of bullets through his lights, the hero and the heroine have been united in a warm handshake, and the Lone Cowboy has ridden off into the setting sun.

Well, all this is fine, except that every so often one finds baffling changes in the script, which not only interfere with one's enjoyment of the age-old folk-tale of the villanous gambling den proprietor, the crooked sheriff, the beautiful daughter of the heavily-mortgaged rancher, the noble young cowboy who loves her, and the mysterious cowpoke who rides into town out of the unknown and helps put things to right, but also confuses and frequently baffles.

Since you can't go back and see the beginning again as in the movie house, you don't know were you are, or what's afoot, or how far along you have come in the story. This confusion could easily be obviated by just telling ONE story, and never any other . . .

Figure it out—it's really like opera. You don't have a lot of stories abut Pagliacci, Tosca or La Boheme. There's just one of each which they keep giving over and over again, same yarn, same music. Only thing they do is freshen up the scenery every thirty or forty years and change the cast. But you hear people talk about Signor Ravioli Spaghetinni and what a great Pagliacci he was back in 1910. That's the way I think it ought to be with Westerns.

ONLY CAST CHANGES

See what I mean? You don't change the story. You just change the cast from time to time as new stars are born. THEN you have a real basis for comparison. People will talk about Joe McSwogle's crooked sheriff until a new actor comes along and dares to play him without handlebar mustaches. Then that will become the classic style of performing the part.

And in the same manner, no leading woman, ingenue or actress could expect to be taken seriously unless she has at least one performance of Violet, the poor but honest rancher's daughter, to her credit. For this wonderful character coming into violent contact with life in the raw and evil men's passions, must run the gamut of emotions from A to Z, and when the golden sun finally sinks to rest beneath the rim of the western horizon, there just ain't nothing she ain't done in the way of play-acting.

You would be allowed small innovations, like, for instance, in the fight in the saloon, the hero belts the villain one on the chops and knocks him up onto the second-floor balcony, instead of vice versa, but you would never change the sequence of the fight, its manner of starting, or its position in the story.

The same with the chase. A director would be allowed latitude in the type and number of horses and men and the terrain over which they pursue one another, number of shots fired, etc., but it must always come at the same time in the story so that when you see it, you know exactly where you are.

And here I have one cozy suggestion to make, namely all the heroes have white horses and the villains black ones so that you can never be in doubt as to who is after whom, and who is leading. This will come in handy in identifying la petite chasse in which the villains chase the hero at the beginning of the film from the grande chasse, in which the posse takes after the evil ones at the end. There would be standard and classic performances for every one from the lead right down to the fellow who says, "They went thataway, Sheriff."

That's how I'D like my Westerns.

Brigadier's Biography Preserves Rommel Legend

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

ROMMEL, the youngest field-marshal in the German army, whose exploits in the western desert made of him an almost legendary figure to the British soldier as well as his own crack Afrika Korps, is the subject of one of the year's most fascinating biographies.

It is Brigadier Desmond Young's Rommel, published by Collins, with a forward by Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck, who considered his old adversary an exceptional commander and master of improvisation.

At 49, at the peak of his professional career and success in North Africa in 1941 Hitler promoted the "desert fox," who "was the Afrika Korps to his own men as well as the enemy, "field marshal."

Scarcely three years later the same dictator ordered his murder—technically known as suicide—and then with the Chicago ganster's "mortuary sense," called for national mourning and full military honors. The trappings of death were as magnificent and unstinted as they were hypocritical.

Brig. Young, a two-war veteran who served and was captured in North Africa has done a first-rate job on a man who would have appeared quite lacking in personality at the hands of a less capable biographer. War and its operation was Rommel's only interest, outside his wife, whom he wrote daily.

ERWIN ROMMEL

ADAPTED TO WAR

"In all armies there is a small minority of professional soldiers (and a few amateurs) who find in war the one occupation to which they are perfectly adapted," the author wrote.

"Of this small company of exceptional men was Rommel, on the winning side. From the moment that he came under fire he stood out as the perfect fighting animal, cold, cunning, ruthless, untiring, quick of decision, incredibly brave."

A leader on the battlefield who showed no mercy and expected none, according to Auchinleck, Erwin Rommel played the game of war by all the correct rules. He took pride in the clean record of his troops and had strong views on observance of the soldier's code.

"I could never translate my deep detestation of the regime for which he fought into personal hatred of him as an opponent . . . I salute his as a soldier and a man and deplore the shameful manner of his death," declared Auchinleck in the foreward

The son of a schoolmaster of moderate means and far removed both in education and environment from the Prussian officer class, Rommel became such a legend, Sir Claude, then commander-in-chief of the Middle East Forces, said in an order to all his commanders and chiefs of staff to quit harping on Rommel when they meant the enemy in Lybia. It was feared he was becoming a bogey-man to the allied troops.

DISINTERESTED IN POLITICS

The author follows Rommel's career from the first world war through the see-saw battles of North Africa, his appointment in Italy and then to the Atlantic Wall and the defense of the continent, concluding with his suicide.

In searching the records and interviewing people close to the field marshal, Young found that he took no interest in politics . . . was not aware of the atrocities going on in Europe while he was proving himself desert-worthy. He at first respected Hitler while deploring the sycophants who surrounded him.

This view of Rommel's lack of Nazi conections may not be accepted by all, but it is one man's opinion.

When he urged pulling out of North Africa when the fight was hopeless and again suggested peace when all was lost on the western front, Rommel got into Hitler's bad books. Back at his home in Germany after being wounded, he was advised that he was suspected of having taken part in an attempt on the dictator.

The men who brought the message, also brought the way out—a vial of poison. He could take it or go before the people's court. Rommel feared he would never reach Berlin alive no matter what, so decided to take the poison, thus protecting his wife and son financially, as part of the agreement with the Reich.

Brig. Young's 250-page biography with an appendix on the Rommel Papers is vital and intensely interesting reading from the first to last page.

Better As History Than As Fiction

"Ghosts Returning," by Harwood Steele (Ryerson Press).

Mr. Harwood Steele is an "original man" of the R.C.M.P., one of those who were born in the force. His father was the late Major-General Sir Sam Steele, who commanded the R.N.W.M.P. in the Yukon gold rush and who served with distinction in two wars.

Further Mr. Steele has kept in close touch with everything pertaining to the Mounties and the vestigial knowledge he may lack himself is willingly supplied by talks with other veterans of the force.

It follows, therefore, that any book on the subject of the world's most famous police force by this author will have an authentic flavor and be packed with the early history of Western Canada.

"Ghosts Returning," however, has little else. There is an involved story in it whose plot this reviewer never did fully unravel. It would have been far better as a book of reminiscences or straight history.

Minister's Wife Writes Vitally

"The Tower and the Town," by Grace Campbell (Collins).

A story without an end—that is perhaps the best way to describe Grace Campbell's new novel of a young minister, his wife, his church and their community.

"The Tower and The Town" does have a definite beginning when Rorie Munro, former Second World War flier, leads his first service as minister of St. David's in the suburban community of Craskie. But as the last chapter closes in a gracefully written book, the reader knows that much of what has gone before will be repeated in the still-young minister's life.

The novel is less a carefully-plotted, integrated tale than a study in time of a typical community that could prove highly evocative to any reader. Mrs. Campbell set out to tell how the earnest, modern pastor meets the problems of his parishioners and town, according to religious principles. That the author has succeeded is doubtless due to her personal insight, for since 1919 she has been the wife of Rev. Harvey Campbell, minister in Montreal.

Because the story is what it is—a cross-section of Craskie society—most of its people are commonplace. They could live in any town and go to church with a grey stone tower. But Mrs. Campbell has recognized and shown that the commonplace can also be vital

Star Money Is Pandering At Its Worst

"Star Money," by Kathleen Winsor (Collins).

"Forever Amber" in modern dress will be the majority verdict on Kathleen Winsor's new book, but the discerning may find something more serious and much worse in Star Money.

For one thing it is a wholly amoral book. The central character is as heartless and evil a wench as could be imagined; yet she seems to achieve all her ends. She gets all the money and all the men she can use, the first by writing a successful novel, the second by a series of brazen infidelities.

As the book ends she, after having broken almost every rule of decency, is laughing cynically with a crony at the prospect of a new male conquest just lined up.

True, in the course of her monotonous succession of adulteries she muses at times on how unhappy she is and how unsatisfactory all these intrigues can prove to be; but she goes right ahead with them and her only genuine regret seems to be that she hasn't got "more of everything."

Predatory was the word for her. At its best Star Money is an exposition of cheap, false philosophy. At its worst it is a pot-boiling piece of literary pandering.

With naive impudence the author anticipates suspicions that the book is autobiographical by denying them in advance. Let us examine the facts.

Miss Winsor, using that name because it is impracticable to keep track of marriage-divorce cycle — she was Mrs. Artie Shaw once, I remember — wrote a novel called Forever Amber. It was all about a 17th century tart and being packed full of seductions sold in incredible numbers and made Miss Winsor famous and wealthy.

The woman in Star Money, about the same as Miss Winsor, wrote an historical novel along the same lines and was plunged into money and notoriety. She wallowed in what the money brought her and the opportunities it afforded for cheating her husband who was serving with the U.S. Navy in the Pacific.

There is a French saying which translates "He who excuses himself, accuses himself."

Miss Winsor may know why she found it necessary to disclaim any similarity between herself and the woman in her new book. But it is a pity no one first drew her attention to that French saying and its implications in the case.

HERSEY SIGNS UP FOR BIGGEST EVER CONTRACT

Before leaving for Europe, John Hersey signed a contract with David O. Selznick for rights in his best-selling novel, "The Wall," terms of which have never been equalled before, according to McClelland and Stewart, publishers.

Hersey receives $100,000 outright, plus a percentage of the picture's income, plus the reversion of the property after 15 years, plus the right to pass judgment on choice of director, screenwriter and leading members of the cast.

Production is scheduled for the fall, probably in Europe.

HAS BIG FUTURE

Betty Jean Hagen of Edmonton, daughter of a Norwegian-born locomotive engineer, is an artist on the violin. Jacques Singer, conductor of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra, said that "some day she'll be Canada's finest violinist."

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

By PETER ELIOT

Publisher's Small Niece Was Real Discoverer Of Little Women

VOLTAIRE once said that if he had a son who wanted to write he would "wring his neck out of sheer paternal affection." Even today it might be the most humane treatment according to Cecil Hunt, author of Ink In My Veins, published by Robert Hale. After reading his chapter on the iniquities of publishers, who, poor souls are at the mercy of a fickle public, one is under no illusions about the lot of the writer.

Even when a publisher takes a long chance on him and wins, it is usually the publisher who makes the killing. Or the publisher may have misjudged the public's taste by a few decades as did the original publishers of Keats, who would have no more dealings with him. Indeed when a publisher of his first edition asked for his money back, he was shown full sympathy by the publisher!

Even Louisa Alcott herself though Little Women was dull and this opinion was shared by her publisher. However, before rejecting it, he gave the script to a small niece who was staying with him. Even though it was written in a small, close almost illegible hand, the child became so fascinated that she could not be disturbed. The publisher took the expert's hint and never had to regret his action. It has been a top best-seller ever since.

MISSED THE BOAT

Two of the most distinguished literary figures of their day, on the other hand, missed the boat when Sir Ian Hamilton sent them a Kipling manuscript to read, he relates in Listening For The Drums. "Poisonous stuff" was Kipling's verdict, while Sharp suggested the immediate burning of "this detestable piece of work."

Putnam was given a day to read the German script of All Quiet On The Western Front and take it or leave it by a German paper in which it had been serialized. The decision was "publish" and the royalty and advance merely nominal. The total sales of this famous book ran into several millions.

The versatile editor of the Peterborough Examiner submitted his recent The Diary of Samuel Marchbanks, to a publisher who liked it, but did not think it would sell. He is still being chided by a rival firm who accepted the diaries and sold them to the Canadian public. Members of a publishing house who liked Mathematics for the Millions, underestimated the intelligence of the "millions," and reluctantly rejected it. Unaware of its rejection, another firm took it up, and is still selling "to the man on the street."

ARCHBISHOP ANNOYED

Dr. Cyril Garbett, the Archbishop of York, whose scholarly Church and State in England has just been published, possesses an awe-inspiring dignity that unnerves quivering young aspirants to the cloth. But it is his emotional temperament which is the subject of an amusing incident which occurred recently when he was attending the showing of a blood and thunder movie. The villain was getting away with murder, and the Archbishop rose in his seat and cried out, "Why don't they shoot the man?"

Talking about the cloth reminds me of an old story about Dean Swift. At a gathering in London during a furious theological controversy, the Dean lost his temper and demanded of a stranger in the next seat:

"On which side, sire, are you? Are you an atheist or a deist?"

"Oh, neither, sir," was the modest reply; "I am a dentist!"

One of the wittiest replies from a clergyman is that, atributed to Dr. S. Parkes Cadman. "Can I lead a good Christian life in New York City on $15 a week?" a young man once asked him.

"My boy," was the reply, "that's all you can do."

FERRET WAS SAFE

Charing Cross Hospital, being in a central and vulnerable position of London, came in for considerable bombing during the late war. "An enormous paving-stone weighing a couple of tons was flung up from one of the streets nearby," reminisces Sir Philip Gibb in his Crowded Company, an engaging volume which he has himself illustrated, "and fell through the roof . . ."

The Medical School was wrecked in one night. The night watchman on the roof fell through the hole made by the bomb and alighted on the telephone booth on the ground floor, unhurt, unruffled, and upset only because for a time he was unable to find a ferret that had been entrusted to him by one of the doctors. He rushed around the hospital, oblivious of the danger, and only concerned with the recovery of the animal.

Meeting the doctor, he cried excitedly, "He's alright, thank God, sir." "Who?," asked the doctor. "Why the ferret, sir," he replied.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

'First Lady Of The Bow' Plays Her Best When In A Trance

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

IN EVERY CONCERT audience there are discerning people who are well aware that the artist on the stage is either expressing music or giving a technical demonstration.

The natural question here is, how can we have one without the other? And the answer is, we cannot! No one can adequately express music who has not technical mastery of his instrument; therefore, every artist must be basically a technician.

The only disparity lies in the fact that so many men and women who are ballyhooed as "concert artists" have the technical mastery without the artistry. These fifty-percenters seem to get by, though artistry without technical mastery never got anyone further than own front yard.

And what is artistry? Well, it has no more to do with temperamental emotionalism than have the arbitrary expression marks on a published sheet of music!

It is an attitude of mind. It is compounded of intellect, spirit, imagination and sympathy. It is the product of the mutual interplay of music on mind and mind on music.

LONG PREPARATION

Perhaps each artist's experience is an individual thing and cannot be explained in the words of another. Here, however, are the words of Erica Morini, violinist, whom New York critics proclaim "The First Lady of the Bow." She is describing the preparation and performance of a concerto.

"I start to study a new concerto by reading the score to grasp the meaning of the work. Next, I play with piano accompaniment very slowly for weeks, becoming acquainted with every note and the spirit of the style. Finally I work without score and when I am ready, I give a small-scale performance in my home to a few critical friends. After that I let it rest for a few months before taking it out for public performance.

"I am best if, either spontaneously or by an act of supreme willpower, I succeed in bringing myself into a state of liquid trance. Then everything is full of beauty and it is as if some unknown force directed my hands and fingers.

"If I fail to create this lucid trance, I am completely conscious of what I am doing. Technique and style remains but I am playing the concerto with calculated effect. If I am in my trance it is the concerto that plays itself through my hands. And that is the real thing."

BEAUTIFUL BUT DUMB

The recent controversy over the amount of grants to be made by the city to three leading cultural organizations, struck us as revealing, to put it mildly, a distinct short-sightedness.

Few Victorians fail to recognize the tourist industry as a primary one. It is therefore to be conceded that publicizing Victoria abroad is a gilt-edged investment. But what then?

We are currently being hailed as the "City of Gardens." Very nice, too, for those who live surrounded by floral extravagance. Actually, thousands who visit Victoria at all seasons, find it beautiful—but dull! It should be obvious then, that building up the entertainment-cultural aspect of life in Victoria is closely linked to the work of the Publicity Bureau!

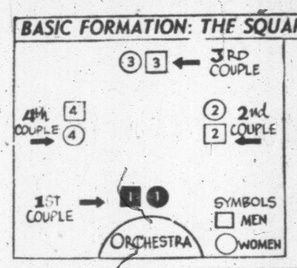
Make Victoria known by all means and in all directions—for all things bright and beautiful! A City of Gardens, if you like, but also a lively city; a city of men and women who are doing wonderful things in the realms of music, theatre and allied arts. Where there is a constant flow of entertainment to suit all tastes and to enhance the—admit it, boys—long, cool, Victoria evenings.

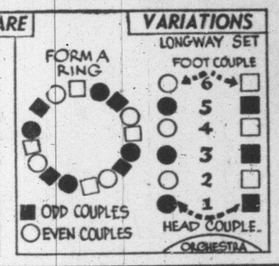
It seems some of us are so dazzled by our natural heritage we are willing to let our human treasure waste away for want of sustenance.

JOIN THE HAPPY THRONG OF SQUARE DANCERS

SWING YOUR PARTNER

By MARGOT MAYO
Leading Authority





FIRST OF SIX PART LESSONS

Some call 'em square dances, some call 'em barn dances or country dances. By any name, every day more and more people are swinging their partners to the rhythm of country fiddlers. Square dancing isn't hard. In this series, Margot Mayo shows you how to do the basic square dancing steps and some of the advanced figures. Miss Mayo, a Texan, is director of the American Square Dance Group, editor of the square dance magazine "Promenade," and instructor of folklore and music at the Mills School of Adelphi College, New York. Here's the first of her six lessons. Save them all for future reference—and swing your partner!

IF YOU EVER played "The Farmer In The Dell" or "Ring-Around-the-Rosie" when you were a child, you know how to square dance. For square dances (or barn dances, as they're sometimes called) are actually simply games set to music. You just follow the directions given by the caller, keep time to the music and have a lot of fun.

What makes a square dance square is the arrangement (above, left) of the dancers. The average square consists of four couples. The one with its back to the orchestra is the first or head, couple. Each couple, of course, consists of two "partners." When the caller says "swing your lady" or "swing your own" he means the "gent" should swing (turn) his own partner.

When the caller talks about the "corner lady," he means the lady to the left of the "gent." One of the things that makes square dancing fun is that you don't dance exclusively with your own partner all evening—you usually dance with all the members of your square set. Each "gent" can dance with his partner, his corner lady, his opposite—the lady across the set from him—and the lady in the couple to his right.

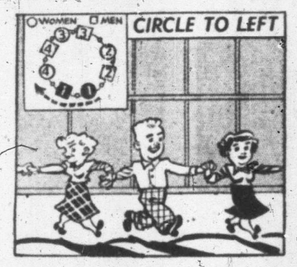
And each of the couples, too, will dance with each of the others. Couple 1 will dance with couples 2, 3 and 4; then couple 2 with couples 3, 4 and 1, and so on.

There are many regional variations of square dancing. In some places the dancers don't form a square, they form a ring (centre). The caller has the men count off, to designate odd and even couples. Then he'll direct the steps by referring to odds and evens. Another type is the longway set, in which the dancers form two lines, men in one and ladies in the other. But all the different types use the basic steps described in this series, although there are many different variations peculiar to each type.

One of the most important things to master is the basic step called "swing your partner" (right). The couple holds a regular ballroom dancing position, although the man stands somewhat further to the right than in a waltz. The couple then swings around very fast, without moving from their "home" position. Sometimes they place their right feet together, and use their left feet as pushers, giving them more speed as they zip around in circles. This is called the "buzz step."

Another common denominator of most square dances is the "honor your partner" movement. Here each dancer steps back one step. The man bows to the lady and the lady curtsies to the man. It is an informal movement, and need not be done stiffly.

MOVES ARE NOT SO DIFFICULT AS THEY SOUND



If you're new at square dancing, the best thing to do is to watch one or two dances. You'll get the hang of it quickly. You'll see, for example, that the dancers merely follow the instructions of the caller, and that most of the instructions are self-explanatory. They're usually directed at the "gents," too.

If the caller says, for instance, "circle to the left," he means just that (see sketch at left). The dancers all join hands and move in a circle to the left. "Circle to the right," of course, is the same formation, done to the right instead of left. Some callers will say "circle to the left and the other way back," rather than saying "circle to the right."

One call that you'll hear frequently is "promenade." In most sections of the country, the promenade position is just like the old-fashioned ice-skating position (centre). All couples join hands as shown and move around the set in a counter-clockwise direction, unless told otherwise. Sometimes, the caller will tell you to "promenade home." By "home," he means your original position in the set. That's always your base, and you make for that after almost every figure. Many dances end with a "promenade home."

A variation of promenading is the "promenade pokey-world." Here the men in the set join left hands, holding them up. The men place their right arms around their ladies' waists, and the ladies place their left hands on their partners' shoulders. The whole set moves in a counter-clockwise circle.

Another call you will hear is nounced sashay. That's just a sliding motion sideways, in the direction the caller tells you. If he says, "chassez right," you slide toward the right. You put your right foot out, and draw your left up to it.

The step illustrated at the right is called "balance," but that's also pronounced differently. It usually sounds like "balansay." It, too, is simple. Each dancer places his weight on his right foot, and swings his left leg across, in front of his body, pointing the left toe at the floor. Then you usually reverse, placing your weight on your left leg and swinging your right leg across. The caller will tell you how many "balances" to do, and in which direction.

Another lesson by Margot Mayo will appear in the Victoria Times Magazine next Saturday.

TRICKY SEVENTH AT OAK BAY

For most golfers a pulled shot takes the ball into the sea at the 200-yard seventh hole at the Victoria Golf Club. But for this left-hander the peril will be if he slices. Apart from the magnificent panoramic view from the tee, it is regarded as one of the best one-shot holes on the island.

WILL ARREST EVERY DOUK BREAKING LAW

Attorney-General Says Rioting Tribe Will Be Restrained

Mass arrests of law-breaking Doukhobors in the Kootenays and their detention in the former army camp at Vernon is expected shortly.

Attorney-General Gordon Wismer said today on his return from Ottawa lack of jail accommodation has hampered B.C. Police in quelling the fire-rioting of the fanatical Sons of Freedom in the Krestova area but "we'll be able to deal with them adequately soon."

The attorney-general promised arrest of every Doukhobor who breaks the law.

No special sittings of the assizes will be called to deal with the offenders because of the pressure on the courts now. The regular assizes in June will hear the cases.

Mr. Wismer went to Ottawa two weeks ago to take up the question of the R.C.M.P. policing the province in place of the provincial force, and other matters of importance.

The Krestova Doukhobors started their rampaging after his departure but he kept in touch with the situation.

He indicated decision to use the Vernon army camp as a jail for the Doukhobors had been reached after considerable study, and pointed out temporary quarters had to be found because no province could be expected to have available detention quarters capable of handling the large number of Doukhobors to be arrested.

"To my way of thinking," he said, "the Doukhobor problem has reached the state of civil insurrection.

"As such, it should be dealt with by the national government.

"But the B.C. police has done a splendid job in controling the trouble-makers and have arrested as many as they could in keeping with the jail accommodation we have."

The provincial officers had sealed in Krestova, the main trouble centre, and patrols were being made continually in the district.

The attorney-general reminded that there were many law-abiding Doukhobors in the Kootenays and he said the lawless activities of a smaller group would not deter the government in its efforts to find a long-range solution to the problem affecting all of them.

Win By Wolves Makes Two-Way Soccer Battle

LONDON (Reuter) — Wolverhampton Wanderers, with a 4 to 2 victory over Bolton Wanderers, ranged alongside Portsmouth today as the race for soccer honors in the English League continued at the hottest pace for years.

With only a week of the season left, four clubs still have a mathematical chance of winning the championship.

Portsmouth, idle today, have two games left in the locker and appear favorites for the honor but the Wolves' victory left the two clubs tied in points with the Wolves due to play one more game.

Blackpool, drawing 1 to 1 at Stoke City, and Sunderland, whipping Everton 4 to 2, retained outside chances.

Charlton Athletics, by upsetting Derby County at home 2 to 1, escaped relegation at the other end of the First Division table. Birmingham and Manchester City will play in the Second Division next season.

Tottenham, already Second Division champions, lost 1 to 0 at Swansea Town in a game that didn't matter much, while the fight for the Second Division promotion berth remained hectic.

Sheffield United, drubbing Hull City 5 to 0, moved a point ahead of Sheffield Wednesday who drew 2 to 2 at West Ham United. Southampton stayed in the fight, a point behind the Wednesday, with a 5 to 3 division over Leicester City.

Southampton Town an Sheffield Wednesday each has one game left. The United has finished its schedule.

Losses for Bradford and Plymouth Argyle at the bottom of the table sent them tumbling into the Third Division for next season.

Today's games didn't affect leadership in either section of the Third Division, where Doncaster Rovers and Notts County have already won promotion.

The key game in Scotland between Rangers and Hibernian was scoreless and the result left the two teams still deadlocked.

Rangers, in Division A, have a game left but Hibernians' seasons ended today.

Queen of the South and Stirling Albion will be demoted to Division B, from which Morton and Airdrieonians have already won promotion.

Women Weep As Murdered Girl Buried

SHEERNESS, Kent, Eng. (CP) —Weeping women lined the streets of this south coast town Friday as a funeral hearse, with a tiny white coffin drove slowly to a cemetery for the burial of three-year-old Pamela Poirier, found buried in woods near here this week after an eight-day search by troops and police.

Neighbors stood bareheaded as the coffin was brought out of the small house on Victory Street here, where Pamela was born and lived until she was put in the care of foster parents last year in the tiny hamlet of Yorkletts near Canterbury.

Pamela, whose mother and father are believed to be in Canada, disappeared from the bedroom of her cottage home on the night of April 15, clad only in a thin nightdress. Police last Monday dug up the body buried among tulips two and a half miles away.

While hundreds of people stood at Pamela's graveside Friday her 35-year-old foster-father, George Gerioch Gordon, stood in the dock in a Canterbury police court, a few miles away, accused of murder. He was remanded until next Wednesday.

New Time For Up-Island Mail

Effective Monday the evening mail to up-island points will close at 4.55 pm., Postmaster J. B. Sinclair announced today.

This mail despatch was originally inaugurated to enable Victoria businessmen to get orders and correspondence away in the late afternoon for delivery up-island the following morning.

The new closing time has been made necessary because of the earlier departure of the coach which connects with the Vancouver steamer at Nanaimo.

Hold Out Hope For 13 Men In Missing Ship

MILFORD HAVEN, Pembrokeshire, England (Reuter)—Relatives of 13 men missing in the fishing trawler Milford Viscount, once given up for lost, today kept constant vigil by radio sets tuned to the vessel's wavelength.

Hope for the ship's safety rose again when an amateur listener picked up a faint call "Here is Milford Viscount."

The trawler has been missing for 13 days.

Three R.A.F. planes took off from Leuchars, Scotland, today to join the destroyer Wizard and five Milford Haven trawlers now searching for the missing vessel in the Atlantic, 360 miles off southwest Ireland.

The ships concentrated on this area Friday, after four trawlers reported having heard an aircraft signal that it had located the Milford Viscount there.

But up to early today the plane which made this report had not been identified and the searchers had found nothing.

Wismer Outlines Many Amendments To Code

The drunken driving laws of Canada are to be tightened up to eliminate loopholes which have come to light recently in court actions.

Attorney-General Gordon S. Wismer said today amendments are being drafted to Criminal Code to stop the many acquittals the courts have been forced to render.

He said the question was discussed with F. P. Varcoe, deputy minister of justice.

"And I expect a letter any day now asking my opinions on contemplated code changes," Mr. Wismar said.

Blood tests, balloon tests and other examinations for drunkenness were being investigated.

Also being considered was placing the onus on the person suspected of drunken driving.

"I'm not saying I approve of this idea, but it does give food for thought," said Mr. Wismar.

"This would mean," he added, "if you want to drink and drive you do it at your own peril."

Arsenal Takes Soccer Cup By Score Of 2-0

LONDON (Reuter) — London's mighty Arsenal Gunners today overcame a stubborn Liverpool squad 2 to 0 before 100,000 rain-soaked fans in Wembley Stadium to capture the Football Association Cup, premier prize of British soccer.

Arsenal opportunism, plus the stoutest of defences which refused to crack before a sustained second-half drive by the Merseysiders, won the day for the local club.

It was Arsenal's third cup triumph and, as in 1930 and 1936, the King presented the famed trophy to the London eleven. Liverpool has yet to win the honor.

Puck Stars Duped By Leftist Girls

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal Canadiens hockey stars, Ken Mosdell and Elmer Lach, gave a swift double-take today when their "autographs" turned out to be signatures on a "ban-the-bomb" petition of the leftist Youth Assembly for Peace.

Lach and Mosdell were approached a few nights ago by two girls who placed a blank sheet of paper before them. Thinking the girls were admiring fans, they signed.

Later they were told by newspapermen that they had really signed the assembly petition which was seized by the police anti-subversive squad in a raid on the assembly offices Thursday afternoon.

SEATTLE SEES 'THING'

Balloon-Like Object Observed To Explode

SEATTLE, Wash. (BUP) — More than 30 employees of a Seattle light substation saw a slow-moving, double-decked, balloon-like object explode over south Seattle Friday, but police said today they could find no trace of the mysterious thing.

Police and firemen searched a 16-block area where eyewitnesses said fragments of the object fell.

Robert Lughead, an electrician, described the spectacle as a "sort of fists together." He said it was drifting slowly and zigzagging high in the air. Suddenly it exploded, he said.

"It just flew into bits," Stirling M. Hill, another employee said. "I watched the only large fragment drift slowly to earth. It took about five minutes for it to float down."

Eight policemen and a fire department crew searched the area comprising much of Seattle's rail road freight yards. The Civil Aeronautics Administration sent a small plane aloft to look from the air.

Sand Point naval air station and the weather bureau said they knew of no missing balloons.

Hill and Loughead said one fragment was about seven feet long. They said it appeared to land near a house.

"It didn't look anything like a saucer," Loughead said. "But whatever it was at least 30 persons saw it."

U.S. Senators Want Penalty For Browder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Tydings ordered a start today on contempt proceedings against Earl Browder and Frederick Vanderbilt Field for refusal to answer questions before his Communist investigating committee.

The Maryland Democrat, chairman of a Senate foreign relations subcommittee, directed Edward P. Morgan, committee counsel, to prepare contempt citations.

He said he believed there had been "an affront to the dignity of the Senate and the government in the refusal of the witnesses to answer" certain questions.

Browder is former head of the American Communist Party, and Field has been identified in testimony as an acknowledged Communist.

Before court action could be brought against them on charges of contempt of Congress, the subcommittee, the full foreign relations committee and the Senate itself would have to approve the citations.

Tax Office Kept Open At Night To Speed Up Returns

The National Revenue Department is going out of its way to help Joe Citizen from having to pay a fine for late filing in his income tax return for 1949.

The Income Tax office in the Belmont Building is remaining open until 6 tonight. Usually on Saturdays the office closes at 1.

The office was busy this morning and early this afternoon, but clerks expect the heaviest rush to come Monday, final day for filing returns.

The office Monday will be open from 9 to 5.

Anyone not getting to the office by closing tim Monday, will have to mail his return before midnight to escape the added penalty.

Wage Boost Less Than 17c Hourly

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coast logging operators have rejected union demands for a 17-cent an-hour across-the-board wage boost but are willing to grant some increases, a spokesman said.

Robert Morrison, spokesman for Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., acting as bargaining agent for most of the operators, described the increase to be granted as equitable.

The 35,000 men employed are members of the International Woodworkers of America. (C.C.L.).

Mr. Morrison said operators are not seeking a return of the 48-hour week at straight time. Their proposal is to work 48 hours at time-and-a-half for eight hours.

Conscience Jogs Finder Of Money

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — Eleven years ago Mrs. Roland Sukow lost her purse containing about $110 in cash. Today she reported receiving in the mail an envelope containing $150 in cash and a note saying:

"I hope I'm reaching the right person. You lost this many years ago and I'm returning it with interest."

The envelope was postmarked Manitowoc and the note was unsigned.
